BURNS ADMITS HIRED MARINES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Employment of United States marines by the Burns detective agency in direct violation of naval regulations is being investigated under personal supervision of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt.

The investigation followed arrest of ten marines last night by Maryland police after they had ejected drivers of eight Washington taxicabs, at a lonely spot in Maryland and had driven off with the cabs.

Roosevelt today assigned Capt. John H. Craig of the marine corps to investigate the marines' story that they were hired by the local officer of Burns' detective agency and that they then obtained two days' leave, hired taxicabs and ordered the drivers to go to Marlboro, Md.

Naval regulations specifically prohibit granting of leave to any enlisted man to engage in any work, for money, which civilians ordinarily perform.

The marines, when captured, said the local Burns officers directed them to have the cabs driven into Maryland, so that they could be seized to satisfy writs of attachment which could not be served in the District of Columbia.

D C. Anderson, head of the local Burns office, today admitted hiring the marines, not only for this purpose, but for other work.

W. J. Burns, head of the department of justice investigating bureau, said today he knew nothing of the matter, as he had severed connection with the detective agency, which he founded, turning it over to his sons when he entered the government's service.

Bill Would Reduce Quota 1 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—A bill extending the present immigration law until 1930, with the quota reduced in the house today by Representative Cable, Ohio.

The quotas would apply to Canada and Mexico as well as to Europe. The total immigration under the proposed bill would be 125,000 as compared with 523,000 under the present law.

KILLED DEER WITH PENKNIFE

NEW BERN, N. C., (By mail.)—Dr. Herbert A. Taylor, malarial expert of an international health organization located here, killed a full-grown deer with a penknife during a hunt in Craven county low grounds. Two deer were started simultaneously by Taylor and companions. Only one was visible. Gunners blazed away at this. The other almost collided with Taylor in its dash to escape. The latter seized the deer's ear as it flashed past him. A rough and tumble fight followed. Taylor brought a vest pocket knife into play. With this he cut the deer's throat.

STUDY LETHAL GAS EFFECTS.

RENO, Neb., (By mail.)—State authorities in Nevada are making a careful study of the best way to use lethal gas in executing two criminals condemned to die in the near future. It is believed that hydrocyanic acid gas will be used, and that the doomed men will die almost instantly under its effects.

WOMEN'S FEET DEFORMED.

LONDON. (By mail.)—Ninety-nine pairs of women's feet out of a hundred are horribly deformed by the wearing of high-heeled shoes, says Sir Hubert Barker, the famous manipulative surgeon, who avers that he has seen in the course of his work as a bonesetter more women's feet than any other surgeon in the world.

Promises Statement Regarding Senator

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 26.—Senator James W. Reed, democrat, Missouri, will have a n "important announcement" to make Sunday afternoon, his campaign manager. Ed Glenn, Louisiana, Mo., said today.

Glenn postponed his announcement at first set for this afternoon. "I'm not denying anything or affirming anything," Glenn said when asked whether the announcement would contain a declaration of Reed's candidacy for president.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 26—An "important announcement" which is expected to contain a declaration of the candidacy of U. S. Senator James Reed, Missouri democrat, for the presidency, will be made at Reed's headquarters here at 3 p. m. according to Ed Glenn, Missouri campaign manager for Reed.

SHOWS BIG INFLUX OF BRITONS

OTTAWA, Ont., (By mail.)—Immigration into Canada showed an increase of 102 per cent in the seven months ending December 1.

Newcomers entering the dominion in this period numbered 105,506, as compared with 52,651 in the corresponding months of 1922. Immigration from the British Isles registered the biggest single gain, increasing 125 per cent. British settlers during the seven months totaled 57,612 or more than 50 per cent of the total. Settlers from the United States numbered 14,900 and from other countries of the world 33,996.

From his humble little stone cottage in Lossiemouth, Scotland, England's new premier, Ramsay MacDonald will remove with his four motherless sons and daughters to No. 10 Downing Street, successively the home of British premiers since the time of Gladstone.

The Scotch labor leader spent the Christmas holidays with his daughters in Lossiemouth. Mrs. Macdonald died in 1911. Her two daughters have since managed their father's household.

GRIFFIS' FATHER MEETS MEN WHO ARE TRYING TO AID LIEUTENANT

1—Charles J. Vopicka, 2—Col. John V. Clinnin, 3—John H. Pasmore, 4—Dr. E. S. Griffis, 5—Dr. James Whitney Hall, 6—Charles H. Wacker.

Dr. E. S. Griffis of Hamilton, O., father of Lieut. Corliss H. Griffis, now serving in a German prison the sentence imposed on him for trying to capture Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, believes that his son's life was spared during the war for that one purpose—to attempt the bringing to justice of the worst slacker of them all. Dr. Griffis, gray haired and worn with the worry of his son's imprisonment, was the guest of Chicago citizens on January 23. At noon he had luncheon as the guest of Dr. James Whitney Hall and the committee which Dr. Hall has headed in gaining signatures to a petition asking Lieut. Griffis' release. Later he was the guest of the city council and of the Association of Commerce. He broadcast his thanks for the efforts of friends in behalf of his son's release from the Zenith-Edgewater Beach radio station at night.

Auxiliary to Favor Bonus for Soldiers

FREMONT, Neb., Jan. 26.—The third district of the American Legion auxiliary expected to go on record this afternoon as favoring soldier's bonus bill for all ex-service men who served during the world war. The bonus was one of the subjects under discussion this morning, but at noon no action had been definitely taken on it.

About forty members of the auxiliary were in attendance at the opening of the annual convention of the third district held here today.

Mrs. G. M. Ackerman of Ainsworth, state president of the auxiliary, was unable to be present. Mrs. H. R. Ball, state secretary of Lincoln, took her place as official representative of the state organization and addressed the assemblage this afternoon.

Said She Was Collector.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Jan. 26.—A new fraud scheme developed here Friday when it was discovered that a woman was calling on restaurants and other places where much bread is consumed, and representing herself to be a collector for the Monogram bakery. One restauranteur to whom she related that the bread facotry had been caught in the Grand Island National bank failure, was hard pressed for funds, and had sent her out to collect as much as possible, became suspicious and went to the phone to make inquiries. When he returned the woman had fled. She had no authority to make the collections. It is believed her plan was frustrated before she obtained any money under this pretense.

BEHIND LEWIS IN HIS STAND

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 26.—After a dramatic speech by John L. Lewis, international president, the convention of the United Mine Workers of America today overwhelmingly supported the administration in its stand against restoring a charter to miners of the Nova Scotia district.

After the argument, which lasted four hours, a vote was taken amid deafening shouts. Lewis was upheld.

Father of Movie Star Is Killed

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Henry R. Harris, father of Mildred Harris, movie star and divorced wife of Charlie Chaplin, died here today of skull fracture, the result of an argument with a taxicab chaffeur last night.

Harris was driving his automobile along a boulevard accompanied by Carl Nyden. The taxi driver resented Harris' "cutting in" ahead of him, Nyden told police. An argument followed and the driver hit Harris knocking him to the street. His skull was fractured in the fall. The taxi driver escaped.

BOSSIE GOT NO DIVORCE.

OMAHA, Jan. 26.—Claude F. Bossie was not divorced at Lawrence, Kas., according to D. F. Smith, clerk of the circuit court at that city, following state department advice that Bossie is asserting he obtained his divorce in the same city in which he married Emma Womsley. At the time of his marriage, Bossie told Probate Judge Menger he had been divorced more than a year. He signed an affidavit he had been divorced for six months or more.

ILL LUCK FOLLOWS KUTA

Lost a Leg, Lost a Lawsuit and His Job, and Is Now Fined for Bootlegging.

COLUMBUS, Neb., Jan. 26.—Retail bootlegging in Columbus seems to be becoming a losing proposition. To avoid a jail sentence and obtain money to pay a fine following his arrest on charges of bootlegging when police raided his home last night, oJhn S. Kuta this afternoon mortgaged his home. During the search for liquor police discovered a trap door in the floor of the pantry. Opening the door they found a pit filled with fifty or more fruit jars, the odor from which indicated they had been used as hooch containers. When caught Kuta told police that he paid $2 a quart for each jar and that he was retailing it at 25 cents a drink. Kuta was formerly employed as a section man for the Union Pacific. During that time he was injured in an accident and suffered the loss of a leg. The railroad company offered to settle for $2,000, and in addiiton give him a life long job at $100 a month, bu tan Omaha attorney induced him to sue the company for $10,000. Kuta lost the suit and has been unemployed since.

NEW ENGINES IN SERVICE

Burlington Places Five Direct From the Shops on the Wymore Division.

WYMORE, Neb., Jan. 26.—Five new engines of the largest freight class have been received by the Burlington railway here direct from the shops in the east, and will be used on the Wymore division between Wymore, Red Cloud, Lincoln and St. Joseph, to handle the heavy traffic now passing over this division. Three of the engines reached Wymore today, and two more are expected at Lincoln at once. Grain loading at all stations west of here to the state line, and even in eastern Colorado, is fairly brisk, and an average of about 9,000 tons of freight eastbound is passing thru the local yards daily. Several trainloads of empty cars have been hauled west the past week to load more grain and coal.

American Skaters Win First Event

CHAMONIX, Jan. 26.—Following the completion of the 500 metres race this morning the Olympic skaters were called out this afternoon to go against time in the 5,000 metres event.

The race was to be skated in twelve heats.

Quaglia, the French star, won the first heat in nine minutes 3-5 seconds. Charles Gorman, the Canadian skater, who opposed him, abandoned the race before its completion, as the pace was too hot for him.

Charles Jewtraw, the American star, who won the 500 metre race, finished second in his heat behind Harold Stroem, of Norway, who covered the distance in the fast time of 8:54 3-5.

Paulsen, of Norway, made good time by winning the sixth heat in 8:59.

Thurnberg, of Finland, who tied for third place in the 500 metres race, appeared the probable winner of the 5,000 metre event when he won his heat in the fast time of 8:39.

Richard Donovan, the Saranac Lake youngster, collapsed at the finish of his heat which he lost to Vanhazebrook, Belgium who covered the distance in 9:05 3-5.

The point score after the first event, the 500 metres race was United States 10, Norway 8 1-2, Finland 8 1-2, Sweden 2.

Johnson Protests State Convention

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Senator Hiram Johnson, California, candidate for the republican presidential nomination, today protested against calling of a republican state convention in Minnesota to select delegates to the republican national convention.

Johnson, in a telegram to Charles R. Adams, Minnesota state chairman, and J. S. Gould, secretary of the republican state committee, demanded that they call a primary instead and give "the rank and file of the party" the right to "participate in the nomination of the republican candidate for president."

FARM HOME BURNED.

ADAMS, Neb., Jan. 26—Fire, supposed to have started from sparks from the chimney, totally destroyed the frame farm home on the G. M. Klem farm three miles north of here, Thursday. The house was all ablaze in the shingles and the roof was nearly burned off before the fire was discovered. The farm is operated by Albert and William Vankoy, bachelors, who were not in the house at the time the fire started. Very little of the contents were saved. The loss on the building is approximately $2,000, and on the contents $700, with a small amount of insurance.

BOUND OVER TO COURT.

WYMORE, Neb., Jan. 26—City Marshal Lytle arrested Orin O. Cooper of Wymore and a companion giving the name of Solomon Steinmetz, here Friday. They were charged with forgery, and were bound over to the district court by Judge Moran of the Wymore police court.

FALL'S NOTE IS EXHIBITED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Following the offer this afternoon of Edward Doheny to yield the oil leases he secured from the government, the note which James W. Zevely said yesterday he obtained from Fall in return for a $25,000 loan was submitted to the senate investigating committee.

The note was offered by G. T. Stanford, counsel for Harry F. Sinclair, who leased Teapot Dome.

It read:

"May 28, 1923, twelve months after date I promise to pay James W. Zevely the sum of $25,000.

Senator Walsh of the investigating committee insisted that the note be left in possession of the committee for a few days.

"Isn't that unusual," Stanford protested.

"No," said Walsh, "We have the note and we will keep it for a while before making copies for the record."

Some data connected with purchase of a home by Zevely with money given him by Sinclair also was introduced.

When asked about books of the Hyva corporation, a Sinclair concern, Stanford said he had cabled Sinclair in Europe asking for authority to produce the books to the committee.

Archie Roosevelt, young son of ex-President Roosevelt, was then called to the stand.

Roosevelt, who resigned from employ of Harry F. Sinclair because of "suspicions" regarding his lease of Teapot Dome from Fall, was questioned by Senator Smoot.

Roosevelt tall and boyish looking said he had been in Sinclair's employ since August 1, 1919. He reviewed his various position "learning the oil business" under Sinclair.

"Have you discussed this investigation with anyone?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you hear anyone say payments were made from Sinclair to Fall?"

"Well, I've heard it discussed. But no one I talked to could give me any more facts. We simply talked our suspicions."

"Then you talked to no one who knew?"

"No, sir, I can definitely state that."

Roosevelt said he talked with G. D. Wahlberg, personal secretary of Sinclair, July 13, 1923 and reviewed his previous testimony regarding their conversation.

He said Wahlberg told him Sinclair might have left for Europe so hurriedly because of developments in the senate investigation of the leases at that time.

"Mr. Wahlberg said he was up happy and was afraid of being called up in front of committees and asked things," Archie said.

Wahlberg mentioned $68,000 worth of cancelled checks made out to the foreman of the Fall ranch, Roosevelt declared. Roosevelt said he advised Wahlberg to "tell the whole truth for the country."

"You are sure Wahlberg said those checks went to the foreman of the Fall ranch?" Smoot asked him.

"Yes, sir, I'm sure."

"You did not see any checks?"

"No sir."

Roosevelt then t old of a telephone conversation with Wahlberg which he revealed previously to the committee.

Doheny, when he was before the committee Thursday, offered to cause his company to reconvey all interest in the contract known as the "Pearl Harbor contracts," if a board of experts decided they were not wise, advantageous and the best that the government could have made. The government, Doheny then said, should reimburse the company for its actual expenditures.

Chairman Lenroot at that time asked Doheny if he would be willing to have these contracts so reconveyed without the intervention of the suggested board of experts.

"Upon further consideration of the matter," McNab said to the committee today, "Doheny now wishes to inform you that he is willing, in order that there may be no basis for criticism of his company's dealings with the government, to recommend the acceptance o fthe modification of his original offer suggested by the chairman.

"Of course, you are aware that Doheny has at all times contended and contends that all of his company's leases and contracts are entirely legal and valid and that this letter is without prejudice to his and his company's position, if the arrangement herein referred to be not concluded."

In the event of cancellation of the leases, McNab estimated the government would reimburse the Doheny company $3,353,000 for expenses on construction on the Pearl Harbor contract.

Archie Roosevelt was asked whether he was correct in saying he and Wahlberg had talked on "July 13" as he testified. He said he meant January 13.

Archie said he also had a "little conversation" with a man named Crandall in Sinclair's office.

"I guess I better tell about it, even if it does get him in a little wrong," he said.

"When I was leaving New York I asked Mr. Crandall to let me know if anything came up, because I needed it to protect myself and my brother."

He referred to Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, who signed the leases.

Smoot asked Archie if he could think of anything he heard that would throw light on his dispute with Wahlberg. At the least hearing Roosevelt said Wahlberg talked to him about $68,000, Wahlberg said he talked about "six or eight cows."

Archie said Wahlberg had mentioned that "Fall might have been lent some money."

"I used that ugly word. I asked him if there had been bribery and he said that Fall might have been loaned money" Archie said.

COLUMBUS, Neb., Jan. 26.—It costs 3,000 Austrian "kronen" to send a letter from Tyrol, Austria, to the United States. A letter bearing three large purple postage stamps, each with a value of 1,000 kronen, has been received by a Columbus man. According to the old standard of Austrian currency the kronen was worth 20.3. So in old time values, 3,000 kronen would have represented an expenditure of $609 in American money.

AWARDED $85,478 FROM "ANGEL" OF FILMS

MADELINE TRAVERSE

Miss Madeline Traverse, motion picture actress, won a verdict of $85,478 against Herbert Lyon Smith, wealthy oil and coal man, in her suit based on an alleged fault of a contract by which he was to star her in a film corpora[illegible] bear her name. She sued for $222,500.

Mr. Smith had testified that he had "taken a flier" in the vaudeville business and that at the time he met Miss Traverse he was making a venture into the movie business. Miss Traverse alleged in her suit that Smith induced her to give up a contract with Fox Films in 1920 by his promise to engage her at $2,500 a week, with expense allowances of $1,000 a month. She said she also was promised $50,000 worth of stock in the proposed $100,000 corporation.

MINE HORROR TAKES THIRTY

Two Others Missing in Illinois Mine Blast.

FATHERS AND SONS PERISH

Veteran Miners Comprise the Rescue Team.

Eight Badly Injured at Johnston City, Ill.—290 of 350 Workmen Dashed to Safety After Explosion.

JOHNSTON CITY, Ill, Jan. 26—Thirty workers were know dead today in "Little Egypt's" latest mine horror.

Twenty-eight identified bodies, two unidentified two missing and eight badly injured, were the toll of an explosion of mine gas yesterday afternoon in the Eastside mine of the Crerar-Clinch Coal company.

Most of the dead were killed by suffocation as gas flooded two or three entries of the workings. Their bodies were found in contorted attitudes with water soaked coats about their faces

The injured were suffering from burns and gas.

In three cases, fathers and sons died together. Pete Keck and his son, Joe, Governor Smith and his boy, Robert, and Marion Bryant and his son, all were found dead from suffocation.

Mrs. Jessie Caplinger, whose husband was killed twelve years ago in a similar accident was a pitiful figure at the mine mouth. Two of her four sons, Clyde, seventeen, and Alson, nineteen were among the dead.

Phil Phillips, president of local union No. 1239 of the United Mine Workers of America, was in the mine when the explosion occurred. He escaped and went back after his son, Phil. The boy had been killed.

Five of the men taken for dead, after lying nine hours in the deadly gas were revived with pulmotors Their condition in a hospital here is serious.

All But Sixty Escape.

Two hundred and ninety of the 350 men in the mine when the explosion occurred dashed to the main entry and were lifted the 335 feet to the surface in safety.

Quick word spread that sixty were still missing. A hundred veteran miners volunteered to form rescue squads to go after their comrades and summons were dispatched to Herrin, Johnston City and Benton mine rescue teams.

About dark twenty-three were brought to the surface, three of them injured. They had been near the main entry.

Thru the smoky, gas filled darkness of the underground passages they groped. Two hours later word was sent to the surface that some of the missing were found—dead.

After midnight definite word came to the surface that the injured were being brought up, and the dead would follow later. Embalming supplies and "mine morgues," were brought from Marion and Benton in autos early in the morning as the bodies were brought up

Hundreds of workers in this exclusively coal mining town of "Bloody Williamson county" kept the vigil thru the night and morning, as they awaited word of their comrades. It was the most disastrous mine accident since 1918, when the Royalton mine claimed fifty in an explosion.

Herbert McCullough, mine manager and Jesse Ford, "face boss" were among the first bodies identified dead.

Track Layer is Hero.

John Reeves, fifty seven, a mine track layer who had worked thirty-eight years in the mines without mining a pound of coal, was today credited with being the "hero" of the disaster. Seated on a cot, Reeves explained today he "just told the men to take it easy, don't run."

Those who ran inhaled the gas and were suffocated Reeves was credited by his fellows with having saved many lives.

"All the men took off their shirts" Reeves said as he told the story today.

Some were muffled to the eyes

"It was a mile a nd a half to the main shaft. As I walked along, I stopped others and got them to walk.

"Some of them bolted and ran, but it didn't scare me any altho I had been working right near entries No 11 and 12 where the dead were trapped I learned later

"I saw many of the men who had gone too fast thru the had a r fallen on the way to the mouth"

Hundreds of women and children braved the zero weather and waited thruout the [illegible] of their men folk

Flares and searchlights played on the scene.

Women became hysterical and [illegible] pierced the hoarse [illegible] of the rescue leaders

The bodies of Victor Laenpork and Ed [illegible] were identified today by relatives making a [illegible] thought to have been a counted for.

LEADS POLICE TO VICTIMS

WARREN J. LINCOLN DISCLOSES HEADS OF PAIR.

Wife and Brother-in-Law Shot by Eccentric, He Confesses—Heads Buried in Concrete Block.

AURORA, Ill., Jan. 26.—Warren J. Lincoln, eccentric attorney-gardener, who confessed murdering his wife and brother-in-law, Byron Shoup, today led authorities to the city dump where they discovered the heads of Lincoln's victims imbedded in a concrete block.

Two bullet holes were found in Shoup's head. Mrs. Lincoln's head was taken to a mortuary for examination. The matted hair is believed to cover bullet holes.

Lincoln, distant kinsman of Abraham Lincoln, pointed out the spot where he buried the block. Workmen dug for three hours. The block was found and taken to the police station.

It was broken open with pickaxes. The heads, in a highly preserved state, were revealed.

Before going to the dump, Lincoln admitted he shot both his wife and Shoup. The motive for the ghastly crime, authorities said, is clouded

Lincoln, authorities said, confessed he decapitated his victims, put their heads in a box and poured concrete over them. Police have not learned how he disposed of the bodies.

The heads were identified without difficulty. Lincoln said he placed them there shortly after the double murder in January, 1923 Chief of Detectives Werz secured the confession from Lincoln after hours of questioning. Lincoln was reluctant, Werz said, but finally, without a show of emotion, admitted shooting his wife and Shoup.

Lincoln then told how he decapitated the bodies and described the subsequent disposal of the heads. He was unperturbed thruout, Werz said, and readily led authorities to the dump yard grave.

The double murder, Lincoln told Werz, occurred on the evening of January 10, 1923, during a family argument. In previous confessions Lincoln said his wife had first killed Shoup and that he killed his wife with a poker in self-defense. He accused his wife of infidelity and said she had several times attempted to poison him.

Lincoln explained the absence of his wife and Shoup from their home by telling neighbors that they had run away together

In April, 1923, Lincoln himself disappeared leaving behind evidence which indicated he had been murdered.

The next chapter in the weird maneuvers of the confessed slayer was his re-appearance in June of the same year with a story that he had been kidnaped and held prisoner in a Chicago rooming house. His wife and brother-in-law were involved, he said

Doubting the man's story, police started a quiet investigation

Lincoln again disappeared in October and was missing until a few weeks ago when he was arrested in Chicago on a charge of passing fraudulent checks

In the interim, Lincoln received money from his wife's relatives in response to letters He also cashed checks under the name of Shoup

Brought here from Chicago for questioning regarding the checks Lincoln broke down and confessed he had murdered his wife. He insisted, however, that she had first slain Shoup.

Since that time, the eccentric attorney has changed his confession many times, sometimes admitting he killed them both and again denying

RATE IS CUT TO ST. LOUIS

WHEAT AND CORN TO CHICAGO AND PEORIA ALSO DOWN.

Railway Commission Gives Eastern Nebraska Shippers Chance to Enter Southern Market When Desired.

Rates on corn and wheat to St. Louis on the Burlington and Missouri Pacific from southeastern Nebraska towns are reduced by an order issued by the state railway commission Saturday Similar reductions from the same towns by the Burlington to Chicago and Peoria were also announced The new rates will go into effect on February 14 These reductions were made for the purpose of equalizing other changes made in recent orders, and will have the effect of opening the southern market to these towns when the shifting of prices makes it advisable for them to choose this market instead of others.

The readjustment of rates reduces the spread between towns a half cent and otherwise equalizes the situation in that section of th estate. The new rates are as follows, the column headed "A" being the present rates and "B" the proposed rates

COHAGEN FREED OF SERIOUS CHARGES

NORTH PLATTE, Neb, Jan. 25.—Tennessee M. Cohagen, county commissioner, was freed of charges of embezzlement here late yesterday when Judge T. C. Tewell directed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

Cohagen was indicted for alleged misappropriation of $900 in county funds during flood repair work in 1921.

Scores of witnesses were brought by the defense to show Cohagen paid for the bridge work out of his personal bank account and used the cancelled checks as an itemized statement to the county.

MINERS TO VOTE A GAIN

Case of Expelled Nova Scotia Workmen to Be Passed on at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan 25—A second vote was to be taken today by the United Mine Workers convention in the case of the expelled Nova Scotia miners.

In answer to charges from the radicals that the original vote had been stampeded thru to secure to endorsement of President John L. Lewis, a motion was made by Vice President Murray to reopen the case

Allen G McIntyre, deposed vice president of the Nova Scotia miners, took the floor today in defense of his men The convention suspended the rules to permit him to speak.

Several members of the Canadian delegation charged that John P. White former president of the miners was responsible for negotiation of wage reduction that lay at the bottom of all the trouble in Nova Scotia

White explained the negotiations and declared that the actual bargain ing was done by the deposed executive committee.

HURLS SCARE UPON SQUARE

RUMOR OF CONDEMNATION IS WITHOUT FOUNDATION.

Employes of City Told by One Lacking in Authority That Hall to Be Emptied of All Occupants.

In spite of a split beam, a sinking floor and a plaster bombardment from within the city hall will not be condemned. Some one speaking without authority, hurled a scare Saturday morning by intimating that employes must move out while safety-first measures are being taken. The presence of a house mover tossed an additional scare. This indicated that the four-story stone structure was about to be moved. It could not be moved to the west without wrecking Commissioner Dayton's plans for a monumental public rest room intended to make the D. L. D. highway famous. It could not be moved to the east without bumping into the big iron flag pole.

Rumor went so far as to indicate that quarters had been rented in a nearby building. Careful investigation proved that the only condemnation was by Commissioner Cowgill and some contend that he never passed the required examination to admit him to the practice of condemnation. Building Inspector Peck did not condemn He has known of the sagging floor for some time and has measured from time to time, the fail of the fourth floor. The dip, he says, is no greater today than a year ago.

Condemnation of city property has been more or less of a joke. The city building at Tenth and Q streets has been condemned a number of times but nothing has been done to lift the condemnation. It has been intimated that the lives of fireman, policemen and health department attaches are in jeopardy. Commissioner Cowgill believes that his own life would be in jeopardy if he remained in his third floor city hall offices. He does not propose to jeopardize. His condemnation, however, extends only to the floor above the one room. The rest of the building presumably is safe and strong.

The house mover did not come to move the building. He was engaged because of his ability to move floors up or down. In order to jack up the joists of the fourth floor, he will brace with timbers from the second floor Bolts and steel plate are expected to put the quarters in top shape. It probably will not be necessary to take out the fourth floor partition whose weight caused the beam to split and become divorced from a great iron rod reaching from cellar to garret.

COMMITTEE GIVES IT UP

STATE EECUTIVE'S EVIDENCE IS NOT OBTAINABLE.

Senatorial Investigating Committee Closes the Taking of Testimony After Three Failures to Meet Governor.

Governor Bryan, lost on Friday, is found on Saturday. He was at his office as usual Saturday. He explained that he had been detained the day before and did not return to Lincoln from Omaha until late in the day In fact he returned too late to be of any service as an oral witness before the state senate investigating committee. This committee had tried on three different occasions to meet the governor in the committee room but each time he had other engagements.

The committee adjourned Friday afternoon with a motion declaring that the taking of testimony is closed No further efforts are to be made by the committee to obtain testimony from Governor Bryan or any other person.

Senator Wilkins, secretary of the committee, will leave for his home at Emerson to be gone three days. He said Senator Robbins of Omaha intends to leave next Friday for a stay of four or five weeks in California Senator Banning, the democratic minority on the committee, has gone to his home at Union He said he has work to do and does not propose to trot down to Lincoln to many more meetings of the committee. Senator Wilkins said the committee will make public some results of its investigations before the report is ready for publication A summary of its efforts may be given to the press before Senator Robbins leaves for the Pacific coast.

Senator Wilkins said Saturday Senator Banning called him by telephone before leaving for home and said he had not stated that the committee investigation is for political purposes. Mr. Banning said his remarks had been misinterpreted.

GOVERNOR FILES A CLAIM

Has Two Dollars Coming From City of Lincoln Because of Liquor Permit.

A claim for $2 filed in the name of Charles W. Bryan, governor, for liquor permit filing fee, caused some comment in city hall circles Saturday. The order was in the name of the state but the claim is in the name of the governor. It carries the o. k. of Dr. C. F. Chapman, superintendent of health. It is presumed that the city needs the permit in order that alcohol may be used, not as a beverage, but in the municipal laboratory

After the name Charles W. Bryan appears "dr". This, it was learned after some investigation, does not mean doctor. It means that the city is indebted to the governor as chief executive in the amount of $2. Federal permits are granted thru the state and the state collects

PAIR QUARREL OVER CUSTODY OF CANINE

Walter Sherrer, of Omaha, and Wife, Elsie, of Lincoln, to Be Granted Decree When They Settle Argument.

OMAHA, Jan. 26—Domestic Court Judge L. B Day was handing down a decree separating Walter Sherrer, department store buyer, from his wife Elsie, of Lincoln, Friday, when the question of the custody of "Jerry" was raised.

"Mr. Sherrer is no fit person to bring up Jerry," Mrs Sherrer said. "Give him to me. I'll give him a good home"

"Nothing doing. Jerry is mine." Sherrer retorted.

"I thought there were no children." the judge said "Who is Jerry?"

"Jerry is our seven-year-old bulldog," Mrs Sherrer explained

"It's beneath the dignity of this court to consider the custody of a dog," the court ruled. "If you had raised children instead of a dog as normal people do, you wouldn't be here

"When you settle Jerry's fate among yourselves come back and get your decree"

TO TEST FOR OIL AND GAS

NEHAWKA ANTICLINE MOST FAVORABLY REGARDED.

State Geological Survey Uncovers Mineral Possibilities of Considerable Importance to Lincoln and Vicinity.

Drilling for oil and gas in southeastern Nebraska is to be undertaken on a commercial scale this year, Dr. G. A. Condra said Saturday. The state geological survey of the conservation and survey division of the University of Nebraska has for several years studied the oil and gas possibilities of Nebraska and a number of structures have been investigatde. One of these, known as the Nehawka Anticline, is favorably located with respect to the largest cities of the state. If oil or gas in economic quantities should be found here, it would have great importance to Omaha, Lincoln and other places.

Dr. Condra, director of the survey, discovered and described the Nehawka anticline several years ago Leases were secured by some of the largest oil companies, and drilling would have been done, had it not been for the fact that granite was encountered in the test made near Table Rock, which caused the oil companies to look less favorably upon the possibilities at and near Nehawka During the past year oil has been discovered in economic quantities in some formations older than those which had heretofore yielded the oil and gas of Kansas, and these older formations extend under southeastern Nebraska. So, there are greater possibilities for oil and gas here than formerly supposed, Dr. Condra says.

James O'Hara, an oil man of Texas, came to the geological survey office last summer, stating that he would be pleased to make a test on any structure in Nebraska which the director would designate as having possibilities He was cited to the Nehawka structure and took a good many leases A few weeks later, other people, thru Geologist Glen Ruby, became interested. They took over the O'Hara leases, blocked out additional acreage, and in cooperation with other oil interests have planned a thoro test of the structure The geologists of these companies checked the survey work done by the state and by Dr. Ruby and all reported favorably so far as the structure is concerned and the probable chance for oil and gas.

"The Nehawka structure extends over a considerable amount of Cass county between Maynard, Manley, Weeping Water and Nehawka," Dr Condra says "but the most favorable part of it is a few miles northwest of Nehawka It is definitely closed and contains a number of beds which extend southward to the oil fields of Kansas and Oklahoma. The geological formations are well defined and the best chance for discovery seems to be in the beds older than Pennsylvania We cannot be sure, however, that oil or gas will be found, but the conditions seem fully to warrant a test. COOLIDGE ORDERS SEARCH OF RECORDS

Asks Secretary Work To See If Oil Leases Should Be Annulled.

RESERVES IN HIS DEPARTMENT

President Fears Criminal Action Involved.

NEW DISCLOSURES EXPECTED

Fall Still Under Care of His Physician and Nurses and May Not Be Able to Testify Monday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—E. L. Doheny, lessee of two naval oil reserve lands, offered today to cause cancellation of his contract lease at any time congress may desire.

Doheny testified on Thursday that he loaned former Secretary of the Interior Fall—from whom he obtained the leases—$100,000 on a personal unsecured note.

The offer to cancel was made in a statement read to the senate public lands committee this afternoon by Doheny's counsel Gavin McNab of San Francisco.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—President Coolidge today took a further step in his investigation of the Teapot Dome scandal, by ordering Secretary of the Interior Work to search the records of leasing of naval oil reserves to discover whether the leases should be annulled.

Mr. Coolidge order to Work followed closely a statement at the white house yesterday that the president feared there had been criminal action and that he was determined that if the leases had been illegally granted they would be annulled.

The president had previously ordered the department of justice to investigate and to send a man to listen to the evidence presented at the senate inquiry.

Mr. Coolidge, it was stated today on his behalf, will gather all the facts concerning the oil leases as rapidly as possible and when he has them will announce to the country his position in a statement.

Wharton issued this statement:

"Mr. Fall is worse today than he was yesterday. His heart is bad. The bronchitis is clearing up nicely but he is in an extremely weakened condition. He is in constant attendance of a nurse."

Asked whether Fall would appear as scheduled on Monday, he said:

"I really couldn't say at this time.

"I will say this tho, he certainly will if he is able."

Secretary of the Navy Denby will be asked by the house naval affairs committee next week to explain his part in making or approving the naval oil leases. The committee meet Monday to plan procedure of an inquiry into the naval phase of the matter.

Denby, testifying before the senate public lands committee, said the leases were handled as department routine, without special investigation by him.

The house committee also will ask him whether he transferred from Washington to distant stations naval officers who protested to him and Fall against making of the leases

Representative Garrett, Tennessee democratic leader in the House, announced he would introduce a resolution for cancellation of the Teapot Dome and California naval oil leases

Senator Hiram Johnson, President Coolidge's rival for the republican presidential nomination today demanded that the administration at once revoke the naval oil leases

"There is only one thing that ought to be done," said Johnson, "and it should be done without the slightest delay That is to cancel the lease.

"This is no time for technical legal disquisitions The circumstances for a long time have required and recent developments imperatively demand that those who ignorantly or wilfully in good faith or bad have entered into or approved or countenanced contracts disposing of the public domain should instantly repudiate them

This is the very least the administration should do It should have been done long ago There can be no excuse for what happened there can be no excuse for failure to act immediately"

Backtracking over the long devious trail of false and half true testimony already given concerning the Teapot Dome and other naval oil leases the senate investigating committee today was on the eve of new discoveries and more sensational disclosures Albert B Fall [illegible] central figure in the biggest scandal since the Ballinger Pinchot case was still sick in bed at the home of J. Governor Denies Responsibility for Renting Commoner Offices to Coolidge Manager.

Governor Bryan said Saturday he is in no wise responsible for renting a portion of the Commoner office to be used by F. P. Corrick as Coolidge headquarters in Nebraska. He said the Commoner still retains an office room for the closing up of its business The other rooms under lease to the Commoner were given up by that organization and are now rented by the owner to be used as headquarters for a republican candidate for president.

TAKE ACTION IN DR. CARR'S MEMORY

Democratic Luncheon Club Appoints Committee to Draft Resolutions—Mrs. Newlon Speaks on Questionnaires.

A committee to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Dr. E Arthur Carr was appointed Saturday at the meeting of the democratic luncheon club, at the Grand hotel. Dale Stough, who presided in the absence of the chairman, Frank Mills, who is in Washington, D. C., on a business trip; named the following to serve on the committee: Dr. J. D. Case, C. M. Skiles and E. B. Zimmerman.

Mrs Carl Newlon, president of the Lincoln league of women voters presented the subject, "Questionnaires for Candidates." She explained that questionnaire plan was largely for purposes of information, to give voters some knowledge of aspirants for office and to start candidates and voters to thinking on issues of particular interest to members of the league. She said a candidate was usually considered to purposely evade a direct answer, when he failed to reply.

The issues to be included in this year's questionaire are not all clear as yet, Mrs. Newlon said. Some personal questions such as age, place of birth and occupation always go in. This year the league will want to know the attitude of candidates on the proposed federal child labor amendment, on problems of taxation, the code and on marriage law. She said the league takes no decided stand on issues, as members are of different parties and views.

Secretary of State Pool said that on matters like the code the division was between democrats and republicans and while he favored the questionnaire it was better to leave out strictly partisan questions. Mrs. Newlon the accuracy of such a statement. She said she know republicans who are opposed to the code and democrats who are for it.

Mr. Pool spoke of the injustices in political life. He said his office had saved the people one million dollars in state taxes, but intimated that he expected no gratitude He was reminded that it was usual for the republicans to come in and squat on what the democrats save

ROYAL PAIR IN JAPAN WED

PRINCESS AND CROWN PRINCE QUIETLY MARRIED.

Actual Ceremony Witnessed by Royalty and Few Priests—Thousands of Subjects Line Pathway.

TOKIO, Jan. 26.—The wedding of Princess Nagako Kuni and Crown Prince Regent Hirohito, future emperor of Japan, marked by simplicity and quietude, was solemnized today.

The wedding day had been looked forward to at one time by the Japanese people as a time of celebration and festivity, but disaster had laid its hand upon the nation.

En route to the palace, they passed along streets packed solid with Japanese of all classes. Both the prince and his bride are immensely popular with the people, and altho the prince regent had requested that his wedding be without display, the masses could not be restrained from expressing their regard and their interest in a great public outpouring.

Never was a city more carefully guarded, however. Along the route the royal couple traversed, a policeman or a soldier was stationed every ten feet—all heavily armed. Recent demonstrations against the imperial family including the attack made upon Prince Hirohito himself and the recent bombing of the palace gates gave rise to fears that today might be picked by terrorists for an even more serious outbreak.

But the presence of police and soldiers did not dim the brilliance of the scene. The blackened ruins of the Tokio which was shaken and burned into debris last September were hung with crisp, radiant flags and bunting which glistened beneath the bright shining sun.

Absolute silence, instead of wild cheering, as might have been expected, was the tribute of the people to their rulers.

Behind Closed Doors.

The actual wedding ceremony took place behind the guarded doors of the palace—thru which none but those of the royal blood may pass.

The rites were those of the ancient Shinto religion and the ceremony was completed when the princess accepted from the hand of the prince a cup of sacred rice wine or sake. That act was equivalent to the pronouncement, according to Christian rites, that they were man and wife.

The booming of the imperial salute of 101 guns from every Japanese battleship in Tokio and Yokohama harbors was the word to the people that the wedding ceremony had been performed.

The emperor and empress were unable to attend the ceremony because of the former's illness.

Only a few of the highest court officials and ritualists of the imperial shrines were present, aside from members of the families. Prolonged prayers to the spirits of departed ancestors and recital of elaborate Shinto rituals constituted the ceremony.

The prince and princess wore ancient court costume during the ceremony, altho on their drive to the imperial palace thru the streets they were attired in foreign dress.

Public rejoicings, festivities and merrymaking thruout the empire will take place today and tomorrow, altho all will be subdued because of the earthquake which recently took heavy toll in Japan.

Among those made happy by the wedding were 47,000 prisoners, who, as a wedding present from the regent, were released from jails and penitentiaries by imperial order. Their crimes, for the most part, were minor offenses. These were expunged from the record.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LESSONS

BY BENJAMIN HAGGOTT BECKHART.

ELEMENTARY ECONOMICS—V. Wages.

IN our second lesson, it will be remembered, we stated that there are three factors of production, land labor and capital. For the services of land in the productive process, the landlord is paid a rent; for the service of capital, the capitalist receives interest; and wages are paid for the services of labor. Space and time will not permit us to treat of the principles which govern fluctuations in all three. Therefore, we will devote the time allotted us in discussing wages, the return to labor which is the most important factor in production.

Labor (both physical and mental) is paid in a variety of ways. Some wage earners are paid on a time basis, so much per day, per week or per month, while others are paid in proportion to their output, so much per piece. This latter method can, of course, be employed only in those establishments where the work is uniform and where the output can easily be measured. Whether workers are paid on a piece or time basis, they ordinarily think of their wages in terms of the amount of money received. The economist is not so much interested in the money received by labor as he is in its ability to purchase goods. For it is not the number of dollars we receive but the purchasing power of those dollars (real wages) which determines our economic position. Thus a German who received ten marks a day before the World War would be in a much better position than one who received a billion marks a day at the present time.

Then again in comparisons of wages received by different workers not the daily wage but the annual income must be considered. Though a worker's daily wage may be very high his annual income may be low if he is unemployed a greater portion of the time.

As compared with commodities labor is both very immobile and very perishable. If cotton is worth more in Liverpool than in New York exports will take place and the price will be equalized. Labor is not so mobile. Home and family ties, immigration laws, the inability to speak foreign languages all hinder the free flow of workers from nation to nation. Labor is also perishable. Unless he has the backing of a powerful union a worker cannot hold out for long against an employer bent on reducing wages. The immobility and perishability of labor often prevent the worker from receiving a fair wage.

If you were to ask a locomotive engineer his wages, he might reply $300 a month. That is the value that society places upon his services. If you were to ask the same question of a member of a section gang he might say $3 a day. Why is it that the engineer earns more than the section hand and why is it that a locomotive engineer in the United States earns more than would one in England? These are the questions which we must try to solve.

Real wages are higher in America than in Europe by reason of the abundance of our resources and the skill with which our people have developed those resources. At the time that Columbus discovered America there were probably fewer than half a million Indians in the territory now comprising the United States. To-day the same country supports 110,000,000 of people with a much higher standard of life than that enjoyed by the redskins. The white man has learned to exploit the Nation's resources. He uses coal, water and oil to furnish power, heat and light; he has cheapened goods through large scale production; he has increased the yield of farm lands through the use of scientific methods of agriculture; he has linked all parts of the country with railways and roads. Unfortunately in many instances such as in the mining of coal we have wastefully exploited our resources. Nothing could be more short-sighted, for unless a substitute means of power is developed our standard of living will fall as the supplies of coal begin to fail. As long, however, as the production of commodities keeps pace with the growth of population our standard of living will continue at its present level. Assuming that education is diffused more generally and that the American people become more skilled in farming, mining and manufacture, and assuming that our population increases at a slower rate than heretofore the standard of living will rise. It should, therefore, be our aim not to increase our numbers but to increase the quality of our people that we may all enjoy greater comforts. We have endeavored to indicate the reasons for the higher level of wages in the United States as compared with those prevailing in England. We still, however, have to explain the discrepancies existing in the wages of individual laborers. Why is it that the wages of the locomotive engineer are higher than those of the member of the section gang? A higher degree of ability and a longer period of training are required for the engineer than for the day laborer. The former are scarcer relative to demand than the latter. Then again locomotive engineers are grouped in a powerful union and by reason of this may enforce their demands for higher wages more effectively than could clerks, for instance, who are not organized. During the war the real wages of the day laborer did increase and this came about not only because immigration was checked but also because many aliens returned to fight for their respective countries.

It has frequently been asserted that the payment of high wages forces the manufacturer to charge more for his products. There is not necessarily any connection between high wages and high prices. If the internal organization of a factory be scientific, if the management be efficient, the products may be sold cheaply even though wages are high. This is true in the case of the Ford plant. The cheapest textiles in the world are made in Lancashire, England, where real wages are high.

Volumes have been written on the subject of labor and wages. Though we were able to say but a few words, we have tried to bring home the importance of conserving our natural resources and of improving the quanty of our people if our standard of living is to rise.

DEMAND MASK ABOLISHED

Atlanta Klan to Fight to Have Part of Secrecy of Organization Removed.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 26.—Abolition of the mask will be demanded at the conclave of klansmen of the nation called by former Emperor E. Y. Clarke, to meet February 26 to "kill or cure" the "invisible empire."

Atlanta Klan No. 1, the "mother" klan, made this clear in announcing that it had taken over preliminary plans for the congress of klansmen.

"We are convinced that the mask has been abused and has put the order into disrepute and we favor its immediate elimination," a statement of the "mother" klan said.

The Atlanta klan announced also that it would make an effort in the convention to radically change the system of electing officials and other phrases of organization.

COLD COVERS THE WEST

North Nebraska came in with extreme cold reports Saturday morning, the Omaha division of the Burlington which reaches up into O'Neill country, reporting 8 degrees below as the minimum. It was much warmer in the southern half of the state, the Lincoln and Wymore divisions reporting as high as 14 degrees above. The McCook division of the road reported much warmer temperatures, reaching as high as 30 above.

The weather map, however, indicated the severity of the cold wave that went north of Nebraska. Duluth reported 22 below, Winnipeg 20 below and St. Paul 10 below. Chicago had a taste of below zero weather, the map showing 2 below there.

Cloudy weather with slowly rising temperature was the hope held out by the weather bureau, its low temperature prediction for Saturday night showing little change from that of the night before.

EDITORS FOR PROGRESSIVE

Iowa Newspaper Man in Convention Vote Forty-seven for Brookhart.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 26.—Iowa editors in convention here, in a poll taken among themselves, went on record as favoring Senator Smith W. Brookhart's re-election.

The vote stood: Brookhart, 47; Old guard, 9; democrat, 11. About twenty editors declined to cast a vote for any candidate, explaining they would be embarrassed at home should their vote become known. This was interpreted to mean they favored Brookhart, but were in anti-Brookhart districts.

Altho E. J. Fuling, editor and publisher of the New Hampton Tribune is the state democratic chairman, he did not pull down a heavy democratic vote or an anti-Brookhart vote in the unofficial choice of United States senator from Iowa.

Iowa editors said that any legislation in congress for the betterment of farm conditions mean better business in their own communities. Since the first of the year business has slumped because of farming conditions, A. D. Scongal, editor of the Shell Rock News, said

COLD WAVE WILL PASS ON

Weather Bureau Announces Sub-Zero Weather to Give Way to Mildness.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—The sub-zero cold that has gripped the middle west for the past twenty-four hours will pass on this afternoon and give way to milder weather, the weather bureau stated today.

SHAKE FAITH IN DR. CASE

MEMBERS OF CONGREGATION HESITATE TO JUDGE.

Woman Said to Have Confessed Intimacy With Preacher Takes Stand and Tells of Long Association.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—The faith and confidence which members of the fashionable First Baptist church of Oak Park held in their pastor, the Rev. Carl D. Case, appeared shaken today by the testimony of Mrs. Charlotte Leland in her husband's suit for divorce.

Once solidly united in defense of their pastor's reputation, the parishioners today were uncertain and hesitant to take a definite stand for or against Dr. Case.

Following Mrs. Leland's admission of intimacies with her pastor, Rev. Mr. Case announced he would not occupy the pulpit at tomorrow's services but would attend with his wife.

Prof. A. G. Baker, of the University of Chicago, will preach the sermon.

Mrs. Leland, accused by her husband of confessing that she "went as far as possible" with the pastor "four or five times," took the stand late yesterday and started her long story, relating all the details of her association with Rev. Mr. Case.

Mrs. Leland said that Rev. Mr. Case patted her ankle in his study once. One time when she remarked to him that her georgette appeared thin, she said he answered it was not thin enough.

Telling the court of how she confessed her misconduct to her husband, Mrs. Leland said:

"I told him Dr. Case had kissed my hand."

"What else did you tell your husband?" Attorney F. A. Brown, "friend of the court" asked.

"I told him the first time Dr. Case put his hands on me."

"Where did he put his hands on you?"

"On my neck."

The witness then described the scene in the pastor's study at the parish house.

"What did you tell your husband next?"

"I told him that Dr. Case put his arm around me and kissed me on the forehead and cheek."

"How many times did he kiss you?"

"Once. And then I kissed him on the lips, just as I would kiss a friend—impulsively."

Mrs. Leland will take the stand at the re-opening of court Monday and complete her testimony.

Radio Gossip.

J. H. Platz

Friday night was one of the most freakish we have ever experienced. Te stations west of Lincoln came in better than usual but those east, north or south were very hard to get. WOC, Davenport, was barely understandable on a standard set using two tubes. We had planned especially to listen to the band at KDKA and the orchestra at WFAA but neither were to be found. We just had to listen to something so satisfied ourselves with a little music from the west coast. WFI was the first one heard but he was rather weak so the WOAW program was listened to until some of the other westerners came on. KFAE at Pullman, Washington, was heard at 9:48 but we did not care for lectures so listened to WOAW some more. At 10:08 KHJ, Los Angeles, was tuned in and, with the exception of a few moments spent with KGW, listened to to for the remainder of the evening.

The Chicago Civic Opera season ends tonight with the broadcasting of "Martha" from KYW. It will be given direct from the Auditorium theater at 7:45. Martha is popular wherever it is given but you will not have to come early in order to get a seat.

If you prefer dance music tune in on any of the following: CKAC, KFI, KGW, WCAP, WDAP, WEAF, WJAX, WJAZ, WLAG or WOR. KSD will have an orchestra concert, organ and instrumental specialties direct from the Missouri theater. As is usually the case on Saturday night, there will be a large number of stations on the air and one will be able to pick out the type of program he likes best.

A speech by W. J. Bryan given at Chattanooga, Tenn., was plainly heard by radio fans in Lincoln Friday night. Those living near Fairview expressed especial enjoyment over hearing the speech of their former neighbor. He was giving his anti-evolution address.

President Coolidge has communicated successfully with Captain Donald B. MacMillan in the Arctic.

The combined services of three internationally known systems of communication, private and commercial, the Radio Corporation of America, the American Radio Relay league and the Western Union Telegraph company were required to connect by ether and land wire the president's private office in the white house with the cabin of the ice-bound schooner "Bowdoin" in winter quarters at North Greenland, submerged in the stillness of the far north.

The message from the chief executive to the explorer was turned over first to the Radio Corporation and reached its New York offices. There it remained because this organization's world-wide chain of communication is carried on by huge high-power stations operating on exceptionally long wave lengths while all communication to and from the explorer is carried on by amateur short wave stations.

The next stage of the journey was via the Western Union to the headquarters of the American Radio Relay league at Hartford, Conn. Immediately the message was handed to S. Kruse, operator of station 10A in that city. He closed his antenna switch and persistently called amateurs in the Great Lakes region.

After several vain attempts, the message was received at the amateur station, 8ZZ, in Detroit, Mich., from which point it was relayed to another amateur in western Canada. Meanwhile twenty different amateurs had heard the message, and realizing its importance, sought to carry it along another stage of the journey by as many different routes. Finally, it reached 9BP, operated by Jack Barnsley at Prince Rupert, British Columbia, who sent it on the final lap to North Greenland.

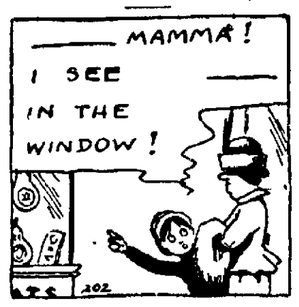

The reply received by Barnsley from the explorer read: "Deeply appreciative of your holiday greetings and wishes for New Year alls well on the Bowdoin in the middle of the long Arctic night." This was received at the white house by means of amateur radio to Prince Rupert, Western Union to Hartford, Conn., and the Radio Corporation of America to Washington, D. C.

It is interesting to note that Lincoln was represented among the amateurs handling the message. J. A. Murphy, 9AEC, received it from 9AAW in Chicago and passed it on toward 6XAD, off the coast of California, who is in regular communication with WNP, the station on the Bowdoin.

PROTEST BEER TAX.

MUNICH, (By mail.)—The "Associated Christian Brewery Workers" of Bavaria have opened a new breach between Munich and Berlin, reviving at the same time the ancient feud between hard liquor and the malt. Berlin proposes to increase the tax on beer. Bavaria protests that beer is liquid bread and takes a dig at the profligate north, by suggesting instead more taxes on "Schnaps."

THE LEAP YEAR GIRL

BY Fay Stevenson

SHOULD A GIRL PROPOSE?

A Midnight Fright.

As Peggy danced with Munson and later with Welford her eyes constantly sought the door leading from the garden to the conservatory. What was keeping Gregory out on the lawn this chilly evening? He had strolled out in his evening clothes without even a scarf to protect him and yet he was bundled into a great raccoon coat when he arrived at the dance.

Suddenly there was a shot. It came from the lawn and everybody stopped short. Even the musicians sensed something was wrong and their light foxtrot ceased. All the young people ran out into the starry night.

"Quick, Munson, loan us your flashlight," cried Welford. "It came from this direction."

There was a scuffle of feet, then a low whistle and two squat figures in heavy overcoats ran down the road and were off in a motor car.

"They shot at someone but evidently missed him," surmised Welford. "They must have been after someone inside."

"They shot at Gregory!" cried Peggy. "He has been on the lawn for half an hour."

"By George, Gregory!" exclaimed Welford. "That's right, I haven't seen him. Hey, Gregory, speak up!"

A low moan came to them a few feet away and with the aid of the searchlight they found him in a little heap.

"Get an ambulance," he managed to say weakly. "I guess they got me."

Peggy was down on her knees gently putting back the hair from his eyes. Margie, too, was rubbing his hands and trying to persuade him not to think of dying.

"Lots of people have been shot, dear," she kept saying. "They'll hustle you off to the hospital, find the bullet and you'll be back to dictate letters to me in a fortnight, won't he, Peggy?"

Meanwhile someone had summoned an ambulance and they had carried Gregory into the conservatory.

"They haven't got you this time, old man," assured Welford, "but they got your wallet and watch. Just a case of robbery, and I bet you tried to fight them back."

Gregory was too weak to reply, but he clenched his fist, meaning he had done a little work with that weapon before the bullet came.

"Gavin, dear, I'll come to see you as soon as I'm permitted," whispered Peggy just before the ambulance arrived and she was rewarded with a twisted, weary little smile.

Governor Bryan had a ready retort Saturday when his attention was called to a statement made by Railway Commissioner Charles A. Randall in which the latter said the governor had criticised him.

"I have made no reference to Mr. Randall, either by name or implication," said Governor Bryan. "I am unable to understand his rushing into print in order to defend himself from criticism unless his action is an exemplification of the scriptural phrase, "The guilty flee when no man pursueth."

The governor had been quoted by a newspaper as having said the people thought they had elected a progressive for railway commissioner but had found him to be a conservative. His statement that he said nothing about Mr. Randall is deemed a denial of the newspaper story. The governor's original statement was in the nature of a warning to farmers that "power interests" are trying to pack the next legislature and elect a member of the railway commission.

TEMPERAMENT HAS FLING

Actor Fined $1 in Police Court for Assaulting Orchestra Leader and Disturbing the Peace.

Alleging that Jack Joyce, a headliner at the Liberty theater this week, assaulted him with a crutch, Friday night, Arthur J. Babich who is director of the orchestra, filed a complaint at the police court Saturday morning and the defendant fined $1 and costs. The complaint was the culmination of an "artists dispute" at the theater, Friday night when the two men disagreed during rehearsal as to the tempo a certain piece should be played.

Jack Joyce said the orchestra refused to play during his last act following the alterration and he was compelled to entertain the audience without accompaniment. He is a British citizen and lost his leg in the World War while serving with the British army.

The actor says he did not actually strike Mr. Babich but "drew his blow," to use his own words. He smilingly announced that he would file a complaint against the leader for refusing to play during his act.

SEEKS QUIET OF SENATE

Representative Vance of Hastings Would Transfer to House Where Fire Hose Is Unnecessary.

Representative R. R. Vance of Hastings filed nomination papers Saturday with Secretary of State Pool. Mr. Vance is a republican. He has served three consecutive terms in the house of representatives, but is now a candidate for the state senate. His district is the twenty-sixth senatorial, comprising Adams and Clay counties. Eric Johnson of Hastings, republican, is now representing this district. He has served several terms in the legislature. Representative Vance, like other members of the lower house, aspires to sit in the quiet and dignified senate where no two members talk at once, where bedlam never breaks loose and where a member is never in danger of having a fire hose turned upon him to stop his flow of oratory.

JUDGE'S OFFICE IS VACANT

Five Attorneys of Ninth District Suggested to Governor and Suitable for Appointment.

Governor Bryan said there are no applicants for the vacancy in the judgeship in the ninth judicial district, a vacancy caused by the death of Judge W. V. Allen, but that the names of several attorneys had been suggested to him as suitable for appointment. The governor has taken no action. Among those mentioned for the place, said the governor, are DeWitt C. Chase of Stanton, Douglas Cones of Pierce, C. H. Stewart of Norfolk, Frank A. Warner of Norfolk, M. B. Foster of Madison and Judge A. R. Oleson of Wisner. Willis E. Reed of Madison was recently quoted as saying he would take the appointment if it were forced upon him. Mr. Reed was formerly attorney general of Nebraska. His first choice is to run for the United States senate.

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: Allow me a bit o' space, please, ma'am, in your delectable column. I wouldst indite a few trite lines in utter condemnation of one Jazz Baby, whose gnarled and twisted effusion made its appearence in our midst on the darksome and weary evening of January 19th, an evening, forsooth, jammed and clogged with flying snowflakes and sassy Alaskan breezes.

Jazz Baby, in sweet accents (can't you just hear her lisping voice pregnated with baby chatter) and without malice aforethought or due respect for Mons. Volstead's cunning little bit o' legislation, announced that she found a holy joy in getting "pickled" and scooting thru the drab streets of her native hamlet in a Ford sedan with her trilbys hanging out the window with all the abandonment of her flapper consciousness. In the same breath, hootch-laden, I presume, she says that she regards it as a chaste bit of deportment for her to glue a Camel fag to her lower lip and suck the pearl-gray smoke from said fag down into her lungs.

Also, Jassmania reminds us that she just fairly dotes on the boys, bless their li'l devilish hearts, and thinks that a day spent without coddling and petting them (dis am lepyear) is a day entirely barren and unproductive. She believes in having a steady, so she informs us, but there is nothing like having more than one round o' shells. It's so downright independent when you can string along with any of the boys, you see, and Jazz Baby isn't anything if not independent. In fact, Jassica has to have that feeling of unrestrained freedom. She represents the new girl, whatever is meant by that. She's 1924, with all the latest frills and improvements.

The so-called flapper, you must understand, is so clean and sweet and angelic. If you do not believe this, just peruse Jassica's memoirs. Cigarets and hootch and late hours and the smell of gasoline and Sunoco purifies the soul. Youth eternal is concealed in the hootch bottle and the fag pack, according to Jazz Baby. Esther and Ruth and Rebecca, and the other saintly souls whose names mean more than printers' ink can possibly give them, cannot be compared with your pure and dainty creature of this age who has discovered the vital properties of hootch and nicotine. And just think of those brave and courageous women who crossed the Missouri sixty-odd years ago with their men to pioneer a new country. Think of those hardy women who braved the dangers and cruelties of an undeveloped country because they loved their men. I do not believe they smoked fags, swilled hootch, or attended unseemly petting parties, yet somehow they filled their places in the world nobly. I wonder if Jazz Baby (a very, very indelicate nom de plume, I think.) or any of her ilk would go thru one half what some of these prairie mothers went thru that their men, whom they loved, God knows, could have help, and companionship, and nursing? But that is a foolish question. I daresay you couldn't select a dozen so-called flappers out of a possible thousand who would sacrifice automobiles, petting parties, movie shows, and cheap dancing orgies for the sake of a man moving to a new country. Yet, Jazz Infant proclaims that her type is superior in every way to the type that made this great west possible. She might as well say that her superiority includes the angels of heaven. I do not know what they mean by cleanliness. Perhaps, like everything else modern, including religion, it's a matter of opinion, anybody's opinion. But I do know that if these women were not clean than snow is in black and coal is a rival to the lilies of the field.

When giddy-pated girls, casting about for alibis, fall back on that silly old assertion that the girls of today are cleaner, better and sweeter than the girls of yesterday, they should pick up the daily papers and read of the crimes women are committing this day. Never in the history of the country have young women engaged in outlawry as they are doing now, and most of them are of the flapper type. They drink hootch, smoke fags, and are versed in the use of firearms and dope. Twenty years ago such things were practically unknown in our smaller towns. Today, the knowledge is widespread. They call Omaha a wicked city, yet we have inland towns, miserable little Main Street hamlets, where the same things are done that are done in Omaha. But what's the use? This is old stuff. You find such ideas every day in the papers.

What I really want to say is this: Jazz Baby is an old fraud. She isn't sincere. In plain United States, she's spoofing. She wrote that mess to stir up a controversy. She wanted to see what sort of answer the editress (pardon me—editor) of this column would return. There isn't a sixteen year old girl (she might be thirty, but she talks like sixteen) in the state of Nebraska who can drink the amount of hootch she wants us to believe she drinks, and survive. And there isn't a sixteen year old girl in the U. S. who can mix hootch, late hours, and nicotine together nightly and retain enough of her freshness to attract the dumbest yokel that ever tried to date a bobbed-haired giggle.

If Jazz Baby is as reckless and wicked as her spoofing indicates then I'll wager my week's pay that they haven't manufactured enough rouge to make her look colorful enough to distinguish her from a lay figure done in chalk. Nightly hootch orgies works havoc with coal heavers and piano jugglers; what chance has a girl? Yes, Jazzy, you're spoofing. You want us to chide you and mock you and poke sarcasm at you and pay attention to you. You crave a little printers' ink excitement. You want to pat yourself on the back and say that you've sprung something new and original. But you haven't created a great disturbance, I don't believe. Women have been drinking and smoking and swearing and killing and damning themselves too long for you to excite anybody. All you can do, if you're as sweetly wicked as you claim, is to fix yourself so you'll soon be out of male company altogether.

And another thing, Jazz Baby: change your nom de plume. It's so old-fashioned, and this is 1924. Think up something else more catchy and devilish. Be original. Outside of that you're all right, except you're one of the biggest little spoofers that ever escaped Mary Gordon's waste paper basket.—Brute.

P. S.—Oh, yes, Jazz, have they a hotel in your li'l ole hometown and is the postoffice still located in the town's one department store, grocery and implement shop? Your letter strikes me as coming from such a village. Page Sinclair Lewis, please, somebody.

I agree with you as to Jazz Baby's intentions. No girl of intelligence could believe as she says she does. I'm sure, too, she was "spoofing."

Dear Mary Gordon: I am not in love nor am I having trouble with my husband, but I just can't get Fourty's letter out of my mind. She said she did not want any children to mar her furniture. It may be all right at her age to feel that way, but I am afraid she will see the day when she will almost beg for a daughter or son to come to see her. I have seen it in several cases. I have a sister-in-law that had no children. She was fifty years old. She would come to see us. We had two little children. Our window panes had their finger prints on, the furniture marred, their toys were on the floor (otherwise my house was as clean as hers). She would say, "My, I would go crazy if I had this to put up with."

Now she is an old lady eighty years old, her husband is dead, she lives alone; every letter we get it is "I am so lonesome; no one cares for me." I do feel so sorry for her but her life is just as she wanted it; she thought she was so happy without children. My children are married, one lives two blocks and one lives two miles away, and our happiest hours is with our children and seeing the cute things the grandchildren does and says.

I think if "Fourty" had one or two children to care for she would have something else to think about besides a divorce, and her husband would spend his time at home playing with them.

I read the questions Jazz Baby asked you. I do wonder if she really does smoke, drink and do all the bad things she says she does. My dear girl, if you do I feel sorry for your mother. I really wonder if you have a mother. My dear girl, don't do those things; quit them before it is too late.—A Mother.

A. One does feel rather sorry for those who learn, too late, their mistake.

EXPRESS RATE CONFERENCE

Railway Commissioner Taylor and Expert U. G. Powell, who have had in hand very largely the task of working out an express rate schedule in which the interests of the western states were protected, go to Washington Sunday. Tuesday they will attend a conference with Commissioner McChord of the interstate commerce commission and others, including railway and express company representatives, over devising a new formula for the separation of property and expense as between the railroads and the express companies one of the basic features of the new scale.

The companies submitted one some time ago, but this was attacked by Mr. Powell and the western commissioners, who succeeded in securing its rejection at the hands of the commission. A new one is to be worked out in conjunction with all of the interests represented.

Later in the week Mr. Taylor will be joined by Commissioner Browne, and a conference held with the federal commissioners over the proposed live stock rate schedule, which is of prime importance to Nebraska. Mr. Taylor and Mr. Browne have two different solutions of the problem, and others who have been connected with the making of the new schedule have also varying ideas that are to be ironed out at this time.

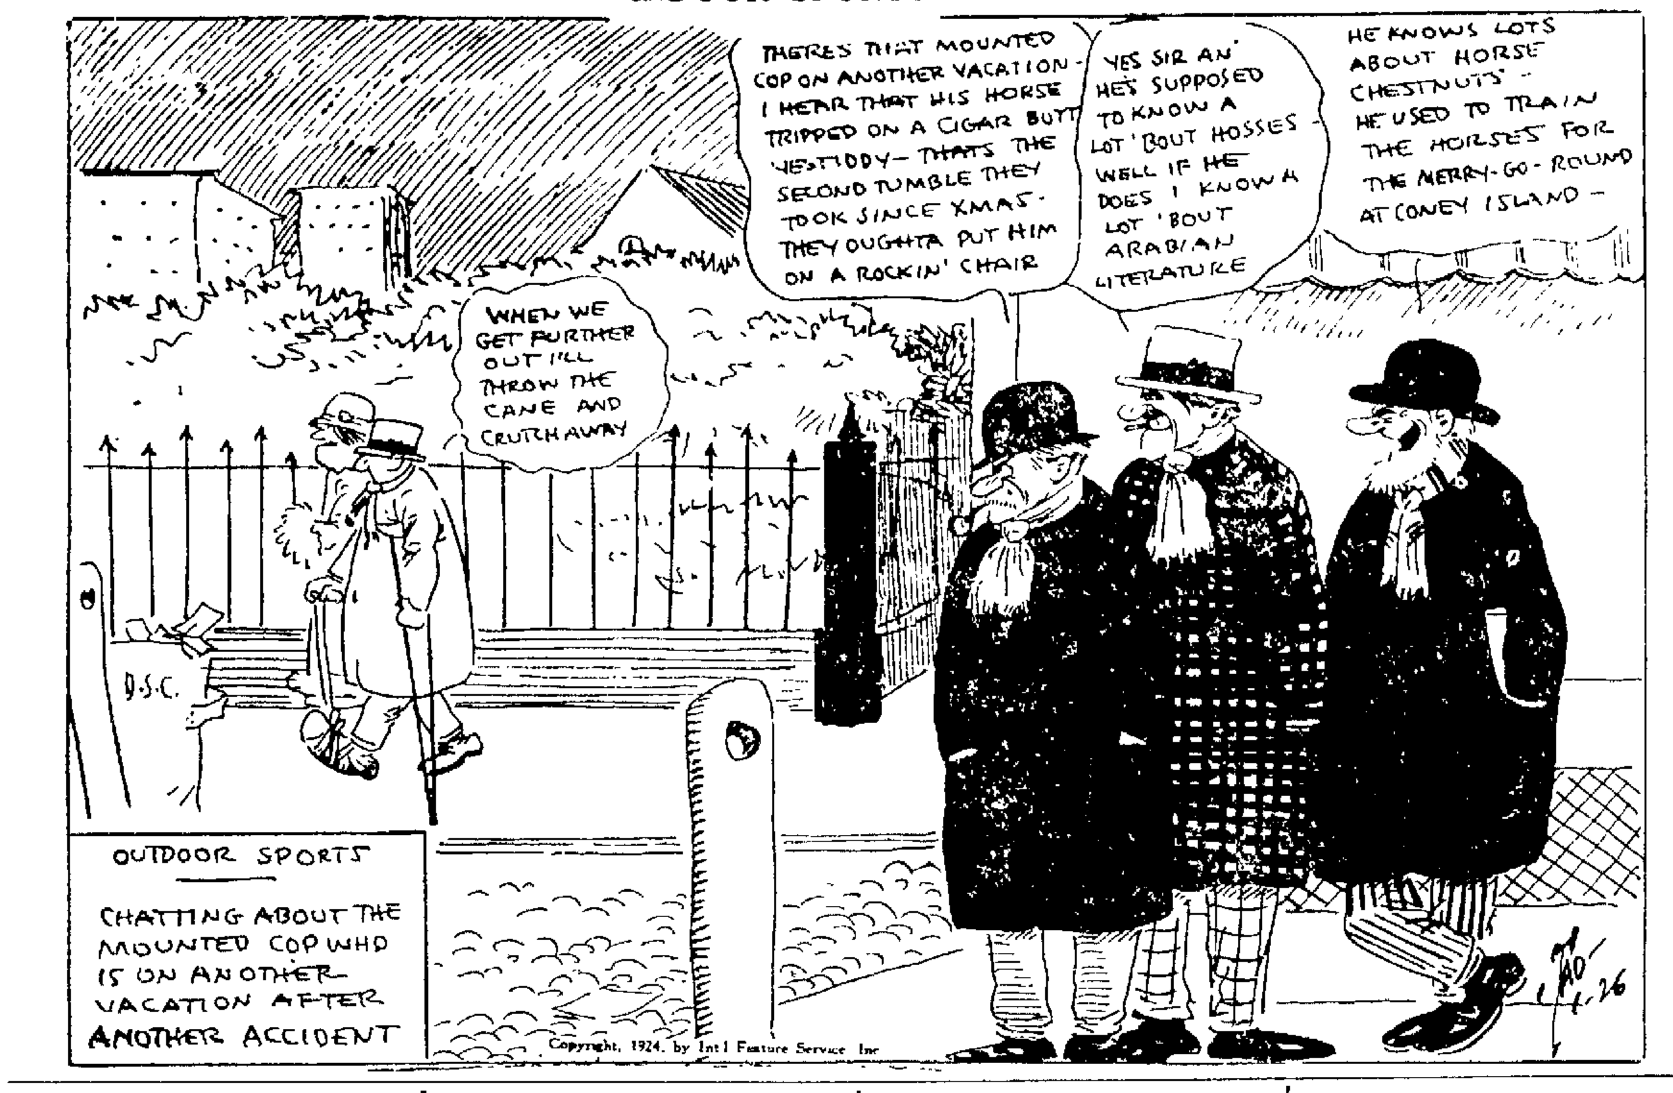

The job of making the new live stock rate structure is one of the tasks that the state and interstate commissioners have undertaken to work out together so that there will be no discriminations or other clashes as between intrastate and interstate rates after their adoption.

Mr. Taylor is president of the national association of railway commissioners and will meet with the legislative committee of that organization while in Washington.

PREDICTS FUTURE OF ENTIRE WORLD

Budapest Professor Who Forecast Ruhr Occupation, Earthquake in Japan and Change in Presidents, Again at Work.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—In 1923, Professor Raymond, of the department of philosophy of the University of Budapest, predicted the occupation of the Ruhr, volcanoes in Italy, earthquakes in Japan, erection of a dictatorship in Germany, change of presidents of the United States and the stabilization of the Austrian crown.

The professor's prophesies for 1924 include resumption of reparations payments by Germany evacuation of the Ruhr by the French, closer relations betweent France and Germany, revolution and erection of a republic in Spain, return of Lloyd George to power and an understanding between the pope and the Italian government. For 1928 he predicts the triumph of the democrats in the United States. Between 1942 and 1946 the United States will lose a war to Japan. Within a few years England will be defeated by a French-Italian, Russian-German combination and will lose all her colonies.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—The man who, a year ago, accurately predicted for 1923:

The Ruhr occupation,
Volcanoes in Italy,
Earthquakes in Japan,
Erection of a dictator in Germany.
Change in presidents in the United States.
Stabilization of the Austrian crown.

Today has a word to say about 1924.

He is a certain Professor Raymond of Budapest. Last year his sensational predictions, all of which have come to pass were widely printed. He has just consented to tell to a waiting world just what 1924—and even later years—has in store for us. He predicts:

Germany will begin payments in kind and in cash on her reparations debt, which will be entirely cleared up in at least twenty-five years.

Establishment of a self-governing Rhenish republic.

German dictator will bring better times to Germany.

Energetic finance reforms carried out in Germany.

Several foreign countries will assist Germany financially.

Even France will offer a loan in 1925 to Germany.

Bavaria will separate itself from the Reich—in 1925.

The Wittelsbach house will regain the Bavarian throne before 1930.

Bavaria will be friendly with Austria but will not join her.

The ex-kaiser will never regain his throne.

The ex-crown prince will not have any political future.

No need for fear of a new Franco-German war.

In 1934, especially in 1935 Germany and France will come closer and closer together.

Poland protected by France and Czecho-Slovakia has a bright future.

The little entente will continue.

Mussolini will bring about an understanding between the Catholic church and the Italian state.

Mussolini to Vanish.

Mussolini will vanish as a public character within three years.

Revolution in Spain will threaten the throne, and Alfonso will flee to England and a republic will be proclaimed.

In the United States, either in 1928 or 1929, the democrats will return to power.

In 1925 the United States interventionists will prevail to the benefit of Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy and Greece.

Russia in 1924, will ask for admission to the league of nations.

The bolsheviks will make treaties with Germany and England.

An unexpected change in the condition of Russia will bring the bourgeois into control again.

The Franco-British entente will not be threatened but 1924 will see the relations between Germany and England knit more and more closely.

In 1924 Lloyd George will play a leading role again.

Within a few years a combined French-Italian and Italian-Russian German bloc will defeat England and she will lose all her colonies.

Between 1942 and 1946 the United States will fight Japan and lose.

Between 1928 and 1932 Briand will regain the premiership.

In 1924 will come earthquakes, the death of two wellknown French statesmen, the murder of two Russion boleshevik leaders and the sudden death of a foreign minister who has harmed France greatly.

NEW SCHOOL AT HOLDREGE

ONE OF FINEST IN WEST PART OF STATE.

Structure Costing Quarter of a Million Is Now Ready for Occupancy.

HOLDREGE, Neb., Jan. 26.—School was closed here this morning to allow for moving into the new quarter of a million dollar junior and senior high school. This building has been under construction for over a year and is one of the finest in the western part of the state. The architects were Ellery Davis and Wilson, Lincoln; general contractors, Henry Olsen and Sons, David City; plumbing, P. J. Kajr, Holdrege; electric equipment, Holdrege Electric shop.

The building is of two stories with the auditorium and gymnasium in the center and all recitation rooms and offices on the outer side of the building. The auditorium is built with a large stage, large enough for almost any kind of entertainment; and a moving picture machine in the balcony. It will seat 700 people.

The school will be able to offer the student a much more diversified course than formerly because of the improvement of equipment in the commercial and technical department and the addition of an auto mechanics department.

The commercial department will be more fully and more modernly equipped than before thus offering additional courses in that department.

The greatest improvement in the school will be in the technical and scientific dpeartment. The chemistry and physics laboratories will be separate, both moderly equipped thruout with the latest acid top tables and water piped to each table. These two rooms will connect with each other by a small passing back of a lecture room between the two. The biological laboratory will have a room for growing plants and animal specimen room. This department will go into more practical biological work than heretofore.

The library will accommodate sixty pupils each period and every student will be assigned a certain period of the day to study in the library. This room will be under a different instructor each period of the day. Built into the walls along the main corridors are about 550 individual lockers.

FOUND SCISSORS IN BODY.

OMAHA, Jan. 26.—Fifteen months ago Mrs. Burton McColister, Valentine, Neb. underwent an operation for appendicitis. Yesterday the surgeon operated again and removed a pair of scissors. Outside of sharp pains when stooping over, Mrs. McColister experienced no ill effects during the time the scissors were in her body.

JAPAN PUTS OUT PROTEST

COMPLAINS TO U. S. OF DISCRIMINATION HERE.

Hanihara Presents Statement to Hughes, Opposing Clause in Immigration Bill Barring Japs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Japan has made another protest to the American government on discrimination against Japanese in the United States, it was learned here today.

Ambassador Hanihara, Japanese envoy here, has presented to the state department a communication making representations against the clause in the immigration bill introduced in the house by Representative Johnson, Washington, and in the senate by Senator Lodge, which would bar all Japanese from the United States.

Should this bill become law, it would supercede the gentlemen's agreement between the American and Japanese governments, which was negotiated years ago to restrict Japanese immigration.

The Japanese note, it is understood on good authority, takes the position that the passage of the pending immigration bill would be a violation of the spirit of the gentlemen's agreement.

The United States supreme court having held that Japanese cannot be naturalized as American citizens, the enactment into law of the Johnson-Lodge bill would have the effect of declaring Japanese inadmissable to the United States.

But Did We Know?

Three middle aged matrons were discussing the affairs of a girl whom all of them knew.

The girl is about twenty-three. She has been having a mild affair with a married man whom the first matron characterized as "old enough to be her father" (he would have had to marry at sixteen to accomplish the feat, but then it sounded well).

Pretends He Isn't Understood.

Said the second matron: "Of course we all know that Jerry is really devoted to his wife in his heart and wouldn't let anything come between them, but I don't suppose Jean knows it. I suppose he gives her the impression that he isn't understood and all that sort of thing."

Said the third matron: "Yes, but of course they all do that in a way. But I can't believe that she really takes that seriously. She must be old enough to know better. Was there ever a time when you didn't recognize that for just what it was worth? I am sure that any of us, at Jean's age, would have understood him perfectly."

The first matron agreed emphatically, and the second matron started to and then she stopped mid-sentence and considered.

"I wonder," she said, "if any of us remember exactly when it was that we began to understand things like that? We think we understood when we were Jean's age, but did we? Can you separate all the things you've come to understand in the last fifteen or twenty years and tell exactly when you learned them? Aren't we inclined to credit ourselves with more sense than we really possessed, and to blame the young people of today for not being as sensible as we were when we really weren't as sensible as we think we were? I just know what I mean," she ended in some embarrassment at her own philosophizing and the morass into which it had led her.

I thought I knew what she meant. And I liked the idea. And I [illegible] for having it.

Isn't that the trouble with a good many of us when we criticise young people? We are impatient with them because they aren't as wise as we used to be at their age when we really don't know how wise we were at that age.

We [illegible] are altogether too wise. We attribute the wisdom that the young [illegible] laboriously learned to the [illegible] at school, the common sense of the woman of thirty to the girl of twenty.

Knowledge Just Filters In.

We have traveled a long road and our memories are not as clear as we think them. We cannot [illegible] tell at just what time we passed each landmark. If we should examine ourselves more closely, we should soon find that this is true. Now and then our grasp of a great truth dates itself by some event with which it is connected, but most of our knowledge and understanding comes very gradually, filters into our minds instead of bursting upon us like a great light.

It is inevitable that youth and age should see things from a different angle. But whereas youth's inability to understand the viewpoint of age has the justification that the young have never been old, the failure of middle and old age to understand youth has no such excuse.

WALT MASON

Despondency.

"I grow so tired of preaching," I said, in my despair; "the lessons I am teaching don't lead folks anywhere. I'm always urging voters to mind the law's behest, when they propel their motors due east or galley west; I warn them almost daily of methods which are wrong, yet recklessly and gaily they push their wains along. And in the morning papers I read the same old tale, of slaughtered linen-drapers, and drivers sent to jail. As I devour my rashers of bacon in the morn, I read of haberdashers run down and rent and torn. With futile hully-cheeings, gee whizzes and ods bones, I read of human beings crushed on the paving stones. 'What profit words of warning,' I cried, with hopeless wails, 'when papers every morning provide such ghastly tales?'" And then there came a neighbor, who said to me. "By Jim! It is a goodly labor, in which you spend your vim. I used to be a demon for knocking speed laws cold, and like a jingled seaman I scorched across the wold. With death I daily flirted, but now I drive my wain with care, by you converted to methods safe and sane." It makes my bosom warmer, rejuvenates my step; it shows that a reformer should never lose his pep.

MEN'S IDENTITY UNKNOWN

Four Who Played Prominent Part in William Anderson's $25,000 Deal Are Mystery.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—With identity of four mystery men who played a prominent part in William H. Anderson's mysterious $25,000 deal, still undetermined, trial of the anti-saloon league superintendent for third degree forgery stands adjourned until Monday.

"Mr. King," who gave the money; "Mr. Mann" who got it eventually and "Mr. Green," and "Mr. Johnson," who helped spend it, remain enigmas to Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora, the prosecutor.

Thruout a long day of strenuous cross-examination Anderson, bland, confident, occasionally slightly surly, strove to recall something by which Pecora could identify these mysterious strangers and help Anderson prove his story of how the league came to owe him $24,700, but in vain. Anderson could not remember.

The trial, which will probably go to the jury Monday after character witnesses have had their day, brought the following situation:

Anderson is accused of third degree forgery because he permitted books of the anti saloon league to be altered to prevent disclosure of an arrangement whereby he and O. Bertsall Phillips, the prosecuting witness, were dividing commissions on collections.

Anderson's defense is that he divided this money with Phillips to get back part of the $24,700 which the league owed him.

This $24,700 was loaned the league by Anderson, who had fortunately received $25,000 from the mysterious "Mr. King."

The Anderson took the $25,000 and [illegible] "Mr. Mann," "Mr. Green" and "Mr. Johnson." [illegible]

BRINTON'S ORCHESTRA TO PLAY

PREMIER IS POLITICIAN

PROFESSIONAL IN RANKS OF BRITISH PARTIES.

Ramsay MacDonald Is Scot, Born in 1866, Knows Hunger and Has Been Prominent in Uplift Movements.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—James Ramsay MacDonald new premier is a professional politician. Men in England make honest politics a profession. In the United States only men like Charlie Murphy, head of Tammany Hall can afford to proudly bear the title of "professional politician."

MacDonald is a real labor leader yet never learned a trade and outside of labor politics would probably earn his living as a farmer or writer.

MacDonald is poor! He has known bitter, grinding personal poverty. He owns a small house in the Hampstead section of London and a little farm house up among the Scotch moors. He never went in for money making. He is a Scotsman with simple tastes and appetites. Strange to say, he is both a Scotsman and teetotaler. He smokes, as his daughter says, "whatever he has."

On the platform MacDonald is a real orator. Off the platform he is as secret as an oyster. A kind of shyness seems to be second nature. Another thing, as a good politician—and never forget he is a good one—he knows that a man who says little has little to deny. It might be said that he is a kind of Scotch "Coolidge."

MacDonald is a fighter. He selected the labor-socialist party when he might have gone into the liberal party with more profit and less battle.

A Real Scot

MacDonald is a real Scot. He was born at Lossiemouth in 1866. Early in his life young MacDonald came under the influence of one of the old village "dominies," who had learned alike the good and evil of the big world and were "guide, philosopher and friend" to the younger generation.

When nineteen MacDonald left for London to seek his fortune. He tramped the streets for days, looking enviously at the bus drivers. He ate when and what he could. Finally he got a job making out invoices in an underground cellar. He got $7.50 a week. He bought his food in markets and from pushcarts, drank water because it was cheaper than tea, coffee or beer. He spent the $7.50 per week so carefully that he managed to clothe himself and buy books and pay college fees. He graduated out of the cellar into a clerkship. He worked all day and studied nearly all night. With the candle burning at both ends, he paid the penalty, a physical breakdown.

He went back to the Scotch craigs to collect a store of health for another effort. He came back with it and little else, seeking a job that would enable him to keep on with his search for knowledge.

The young, keen-eyed, eager Scot fell under the eyes of Tom Lough, a liberal member of parliament, well known in his generation. To a man ambitious to rise in politics, the acquaintance was a God-send. Lough made him his secretary. Thenceforth young MacDonald was in politics.

During his early days in London, MacDonald was forced by necessity to mix with the very poor and found that he had an appetite for what one in America would call "uplift" work.

Not only did he gain his politics from his early association with social work, but also his wife. As a member of the Woman's Industrial council, he met Miss Margaret Gladstone, foreign secretary of the organization. She is said to have been a distant relative of the great Gladstone, premier and statesman, who first championed home rule. He married her in 1896. She died in 1911. She worked from early youth among the very poor, after having been reared in a home of comfort.

Secretary of Party.

In 1900 MacDonald was made secretary of the labor party, a position he held for eleven years. In the meantime, also, an organization known as the independent labor party—famous in British politics as the "I. L. P."—was formed, and MacDonald was made its chairman from 1906 to 1909 inclusive. He was made the leader of the labor party from 1911 to 1914. During these years, MacDonald read widely and well and his books on social and socialistic problems were and are standard on these subjects.

When the currents of the world war began to sweep the shores of the British Islands MacDonald didn't follow the socialists of some other countries and join the bay of the war pack. He was against the war and said so, in season and out. The sign "Pacifist" was pinned on him. In those early war days, he was about as popular as a dog with a "rabies" sign. He was twice defeated for his parliamentary seat from the city of Leicester, which he had held since 1906.

It wasn't until a little over a year ago that he came back, as far as the voting population was concerned. He was selected from a Welsh constituency and triumphantly re-elected December 6 last. Upon his reappearance in parliament about a year ago he was made the leader of his party, which made him the formal leader of "His Majesty's Opposition."

"MacDonald is one of the handsomest men in British politics. He [illegible] long wavy gray hair, piercing eyes, a deep-toned voice, [illegible] with a Scotch burr. His [illegible] moustache while [illegible] him anything [illegible] British [illegible] would probably have [illegible]

BETTY had failed to listen when her teacher figured out a problem for the class one day, so when it came time for the class to tell the teacher how the problem was worked, and Betty was called upon, of course she failed.

She was kept after school as much for inattention as for her mistake.

Betty sat with her head on her arms. She felt just like crying, for she had planned to play with one of her friends after school and she knew it would be too late by the time the teacher let her go home.

"Oh, I don't care if I did make a mistake, I——" she began, when a soft chuckle at her side made her raise her head from her arms.

"Hush," whispered a merry voice, and Gocomeback, the wee little travel elfin, stood at her side, his finger on his lips. "Don't finish that sentence. You may think your teacher is punishing you severely, but if you could see the way a little friend of mine is getting along this very second you'd think your punishment was nothing compared with his."

Before Betty could ask any questions she was whisked through the air and set down before a funny little school house.

Betty knew by the people around her that she was in Japan. Two Japanese men, with a long bamboo pole on their shoulders, passed. From the centre of the pole there hung a hammock and within the hammock, as comfy as in a big armchair, sat a dear little Japanese lady. The runners were taking her to town.

"Oh, those are kagos," replied Gocomeback, nodding to the little lady. The school closed and out came the children in their little silk pantalets and long coats. As the last one passed out of sight Gocomeback and Betty heard someone sobbing and they quickly stepped into the school room.

The teacher saw them, but went right on with his work.

"What in the world is he doing?" asked Betty.

"Punishing that boy for not having his lesson," replied Gocomeback.

"It's the only way I can get him to improve," said the teacher. "I always cover a boy's face with ink when he does anything wrong, and as a general rule he never lets it happen again."

"But the girls?" asked Betty. "You surely don't do that to them!"

"No, not quite that," laughed the teacher, as he finished the boy's face and sent him out of the school room. "I stick a wisp of straw in a girl's hair when she is naughty and she is made to wear it until I take it out. That does just as much good, for she gets ashamed and never wears more than one straw in a season."

Just then the boys outside began to tease the boy with his face blackened. Betty began to sympathize with him, when suddenly the whole scene vanished and she found herself back in her own school room. She buried her nose in her study-book and never looked up until she mastered the question she had failed on. That was the last time Betty had to be kept after school.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Lillian Dropped a Disquieting Hint to Madge.

HARRIET BRAITHWAITE stared at her husband as if she could not believe the evidence of her own ears. Then, with a little choked cry of, "Oh, you, too, Edwin!" she turned and hurried out of the room, and a few seconds later the emphatic closing of her own door told us that she had shut herself in her room.

I think the rest of us were as astonished as she at Dr. Braithwaite's suddenly revealed lack of enthusiasm for his wife's project of adopting the orphaned children of her dead sister. We had so taken for granted that the childless man, whose longing for children we all had known, would jump at this seemingly Heaven-sent opportunity that his reluctance where we had expected eagerness left us gasping.

Mother Graham was the first to speak after her daughter had rushed out of the room. But I noticed that her voice when she addressed her son-in-law was not so assured as it had been. Evidently his unexpected attitude was a blow to her plans which left her at a bit of a loss. Characteristically, however, she gave no hint of her feeling in her words.

"I'm glad you have some sense, Edwin," she said, glancing doubtfully at him, however. "And you'll be able to bring Harriet to hers. Surely you see that the only logical place for those children is here with me."

Her face contradicted her words, and asked mutely for a negative reply. But the big surgeon's assent was quick and emphatic.

Dr. Braithwaite Agrees.

"Why, of course, Mother!" he said heartily. "I confess I hadn't thought of it before, but now that you've shown us your wishes so clearly, there's nothing else to be thought of. You'll have to leave Harriet to me, though. I imagine she'll be a little difficult at first, for she has quite set her heart on having the children. But I can bring her round to your way of thinking, I am sure."

It takes a woman to be a successful liar. At least very few men succeed in deceiving any but the morons of the feminine sex. Dicky's face still mirrored his astonishment at his brother-in-law's unexpected attitude, but as Dr. Braithwaite talked, I saw his mother-in-law start and look at him shrewdly, and I saw in Lillian's amused eyes the reflection of the conviction which had just come to me, that the big surgeon not only had fathomed his mother-in-law's ruse, but meant to abet her scheme in every possible way.

I wondered, as I looked at my brother-in-law's face, which never had lost a certain hint of boyishness, and at his eyes, in which the indefinable, wistful, searching look had changed to joyful eagerness, if he was not glad of the opportunity his mother-in-law had given him to make certain his chance of keeping the children so tragically thrown in his way. He knew his wife better than anyone else, knew that opposition would make her so determined to take the children that never in the years to come, when she should have time to regret the step, would she yield to the regretting for very shame at the remembrance of her obstinacy.

Lillian's Point of View.

"Depend upon it, that man knows what she's doing," she said. "If he doesn't get his wife to believing that he and everybody else are against her in this proposition, he'll have his own troubles in the years to come."

"You mean that she'll get tired of taking care of them?"

Lillian looked at me a bit impatiently.

"You usually aren't so obtuse," she said. "No, I don't mean that at all. I'm free to confess, I don't like your sister-in-law, as you very well know, but I hope I'm just enough to give her her due, and whatever other faults she may have, laziness is not one of them. Neither is a shirking of responsibility. No, I honestly believe she'd make a wonderful mother for those children, and enjoy the experience if it wasn't for one thing."

She paused tantalizingly, but, a trifle piqued, I did not ask her meaning, and after a second's amused scrutiny of my face, she laughed lightly.

"Second thoughts are best, they say," she chanted, "so I think, on the whole, I won't tell you my meaning just now, but let you find it out for yourself. I'll give you this much of a hint, however. You can read it in Harriet Braithwaite's face, if you happen to catch her off guard when she and her husband are with the Harrison children."

HOME-MAKING HELPS

You Can Have Bag Suitable for Each Occasion and Use

By WANDA BARTON

THIS is the day of bags. They are made of all materials and for all uses. It is a difficult thing to know where to begin in describing them. Let us consider first the humble rag-bag. Every well-organized household, especially those boasting attics, should have three rag-bags, one of red and white gingham, one of blue and white gingham and one of gray gingham or canvas. It is so much easier to send someone to get a bit of cloth from the blue, red or gray bag, according to the quality of the rag desired.

First, the blue bag should hold all fine linen pieces, such as those we use for mending, bandages and for other purposes where old linen is invaluable. The red bag should hold all of the good cotton pieces, which have many uses in household economy. The gray bag may be used for flannel pieces and others, like old spreads, suitable for floor cloths and rough work. It really does not pay to save rags for a rag-man in these days, so few homes boast the old, mixed rag-bags.

Bags for the kitchen are rather numerous. Among those in general use are cheese-cloth lettuce and celery bags, flannel jelly-bags, pudding-bags, fish-bags or binders and the bag for soiled tea-towels. The latter is usually made of tea-toweling.

Laundry-bags vary according to their different uses. Sorting-bags for laundry use are generally of canvas, the gathering string or twine running through little rings sewed to the top. Room or closet laundry-bags are made of tan linen or of linen in color to match the room. Fine collar-bags for men are frequently made of bordered men's handkerchiefs and are drawn with ties of colored tape to match the colors in the borders. Women's handkerchief-bags for soiled handkerchiefs or collars are made of fine white embroidered handkerchiefs of good size. Two handkerchiefs make the bag and they are drawn with ribbon ties.

The party-bag to hold slippers and little needs is a deep, wide, square bag made of silk and lined with soft flannel or heavy satin. It has a little shirred pocket inside for small things and the ribbon ties are broad and long enough to swing the bag over the arm.

Small vanity bags are made of ribbon. The small, round bottom has a little looking-glass fastened to it with a flap which covers it and snaps in place with a snapper catch. The ribbon is gathered onto the bottom and is not more than four inches deep, hem and all. It has a casing through which narrow ribbon or silk cord is run to draw it up. A quilling of gold lace or ribbon, gold lace motifs or dainty little chiffon flower wreaths decorate the sides of the bags.

Opera bags are quite wonderful affairs. Many are made of the very beautiful silver or gold brocaded white satin ribbon. The bags are made with oblong or round bottoms and are lined with white satin. A flat pocket on one side holds tickets and change. The bag has white satin or gold ribbon ties. These bags need no extra trimming as the material itself is handsome and rich looking. Other bags are made of plain colored satin covered with gold all-over lace finished with gold lace quillings and with ribbon ties to match the satin in color. Brocaded velvet is sometimes used, also soft silks and suede.

WINIFRED BLACK TALKS ABOUT "One Touch of Nature"

F. B. SCHALL, of Sacramento, California, was arrested for speeding the other day. But when they took him to court Mr. Schall told the judge that maybe he was speeding and didn't realize it.

"My wife was waiting for me and she told me to 'get right home,'" said Mr. Schall.

"How old are you?" asked the judge.

"Twenty years old," said Mr. Schall.

"How long have you been married?"

"Two weeks," said Mr. Schall.

"Dismissed," said the judge. "Be a little more careful next time."

And to look at the judge they say you'd never think he'd ever been a sentimental bridegroom himself.

But you never can tell, can you?

The World Loves Lovers

The other day in the street car I saw a goose of a girl and a lump of a boy sitting side by side too happy to speak, and so young and inexperienced that you could look right at them and tell that they were just that day engaged and wanted every one to know it and were afraid somebody would find out about it and hoped they could be married soon and were scared almost to death to even think about it. You ought to have seen the people in that car.

There was one man in particular. A sleek, slick, smart, hard-featured fellow with a pair of eyes like gimlets and a diamond ring on his finger that looked as if he'd won it in a raffle somewhere.

He looked at the conductor and the conductor looked at him and both of them smiled and the gimlet-eyed man winked a kindly human kind of wink—and neither of them would have let the goose and the gump see them for worlds.

Then In Walked Jessie

Yes, it's a pretty human sort of world after all.

We all growled at each other down at the office the other day. There was something wrong with the weather and the rooms were cold and the chief was out of temper and the office boy had the toothache and the telephone girl had been up too late the night before and you could tell it at the very first syllable of the "hello," and nobody liked anybody and we were all wondering what it was all about—this life we cling to so desperately—when the door opened and in came Jessie.

Nice little thing—Jessie—not a beauty at all, but a fresh, smiling, rosy, competent, neat little creature. One day she told us that she was going to be married and we all congratulated her and sent our congratulations to the man and we took up a collection and sent a wedding present—and that was that.

And there was a new stenographer almost as good as Jessie, but not quite as pretty and something went wrong with the favorite office stocks and everybody blamed everybody else and—the door opened yesterday and in she walked—after she'd been gone a year.

Jessie, the neat and competent. And she held in her arms the funniest little, chubbiest little, neatest little Jessie you ever saw. And I'll vow if that little Jessie wasn't beginning to look competent already.

And we crowded around the two Jessies and quarreled about who was to hold the baby first, and laughed and teased Jessie the elder and made eyes at little Jessie and lo! the sharp something in the air was gone, and we were all friends and all happy again.

What a queer, mechanical world we do build up around us, we moderns.

How we put on and on and wear a mask and hide everything that's decent and kind and real and pretend to be everything that's cold and cynical and unreal.

But all at once there's a young couple in love or there's a bride and groom or there's a baby smiling somewhere over somebody's proud shoulder—and we're human again.

I'm glad the judge out in California didn't fine Mr. Newlywed for hurrying home to his wife too fast—aren't you?

Advice to Girls — By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

We are three young girls of eighteen years of age. We go with three young men whom we love very dearly. They take us to theatres and dances and also to supper afterward.

One of them has an automobile and they want us to go riding with them. We have not told our parents about them, but would like your advice. Would it be wrong for us to go out with them at night in the machine? We intend being engaged soon, so is it right for them to kiss us good night?

THE ANXIOUS TRIO.

THE ANXIOUS TRIO: Tell your parents at once of your friendship with these young men, but do not go out with them evenings unless you have your parents' permission to do so. It would be very unwise to allow any young man to kiss you unless you are formally engaged to him.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

When a woman is past her best years would it then be wise for her to marry a man two or three years her junior, even if there is love of the real sort between them? DOUBTFUL.

DOUBTFUL: If the man and woman truly love one another, this slight difference in their ages should not mar their happiness.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

YOUR HEALTH

Don't Ruin Digestion by Habit of Over-Eatin[g]

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

LAST week some friends of mine gave an afternoon reception. You know how such affairs are. Everybody dresses up, the women in their new hats, and the men wearing flowers in their buttonholes. Everybody talks a lot; it wouldn't be polite to add—and says little. But, of course, you are not supposed to utter wise things at an afternoon tea.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was very impolite when he said he could describe such a gathering in four words each beginning with G—giggle, gabble, gobble and git!

But, really, the tea I attended wasn't a bit like that. It was a very proper and attractive assemblage of lovely people. There were judges and doctors and lawyers and many charming ladies.

One of these called me by name, saying, "You don't remember me." It took a second glance to make sure that I really knew the lady. No wonder I didn't recognize her at once, because she wore a tightly fitting, large-meshed, black veil, which all but hid her features.

"Why," I said, "you are in disguise. Why do you hide your face?"

It was because of her reply that I am telling you the story.

She said: "I wear this closely fitting veil so I will not be tempted to eat a lot of these knick-knacks and spoil my appetite for the real food which I shall have at my evening meal. I can't get the veil off and I can't get food through its meshes, so I am safe!"

If there is no other way to keep people from over-eating I am in favor of the universal wearing of veils. One of the worst, yet one of the most common of our national faults, is over-eating. We must stop it.

The English people eat even more than we do, but it does not harm them as it does us because they exercise far more than we do. With greater physical exertion they can dispose of their big meals.

I heard Dr. Harvey Wiley say that everybody, even babies, eats too much. Their sensible little stomachs rebel and expel the surplus. Our stomachs, like their owners, are too lazy to protest.

A facetious friend of mine says he "can resist everything but temptation." It takes a lot of self-control to resist the temptations of appetite. But if we are to keep good stomachs and proper digestion there must be little eating between meals.

When you get hungry take a glass of water or a cracker. Hunger is due to the stimulation of certain nerve-endings in the stomach. If a bit of bread or a glass of water is taken it will be but a few minutes when your yearning will disappear.

It is a sad mistake to ruin your appetite for substantial food by foolish indulgence in the trifles offered at an afternoon tea. For the sake of your health you must eat regularly and only of such things as make for a well-balanced dietary.

There is a certain degree of character building in the practice of self-denial. If you cannot trust your will power to guard your stomach, the veil may not be amiss.

Answers to Health Questions.

SHORTY. Q.—Will you kindly tell me how to increase my height?

A.—If you have not reached your twenty-first year you will probably grow a few inches. Practice stretching exercises or join a gymnasium and place yourself under the care of a physical culture instructor, who will outline a course of exercises for you.

* * *

M. G. B. Q.—Is it injurious to a young girl's health to sleep with her mother?

2.—When I rub my eyes the lashes become loose and fall out. What can I do to remedy this condition?

2.—I would suggest that you apply one per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment to your lashes at night.

* * *

MRS. A. W. Q.—I had a bad fall on my back. My bones feel sore and when I stoop I have a terrible pain in my back. What would you advise me to do to remedy this condition?

A.—I would suggest that you have your back examined by your physician, as there may be a fracture.

* * *

M. I. N. Q.—What is a good scalp treatment?

2.—What is my correct weight? I am a woman twenty-four years of age, height five feet one and a half inches.

2.—Your correct weight is about 125 pounds.

* * *

K. K. Q.—Please tell me whether there is any way of preventing the growth of a man's beard?

* * *

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Address ALL INQUIRIES to Dr. R. S. Copeland in care of this office.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Here Is a Frock a Debutante Thinks "Simply Grand."

LITTLE Miss Hodgman came bouncing into Madame's this morning.

"If good spirits and attractiveness mean as much as they are said to, so should I think so," I returned.

"She has such a cunning little nose," Pam said.

"She is urging Madame to make a dress for her in a big hurry," Pam said. "I can tell by the coaxing tone of her voice."

"Madame will do it, too," I assured her.

"She likes Miss Hodgman well enough to work overtime for her," Pam said.

"Well, Miss Hodgman's things aren't much of a job," I answered.

Just then Madame beckoned to me.

I hurried over, and Miss Hodgman greeted me with her usual friendly smile.

"Won't you run upstairs, like a dear, and put on Caprice?" Madame asked.

Madame always names her original models, and Caprice happened to be the newest one. It was just finished yesterday.

I did as I was bade, and soon came tripping down the steps for Miss Hodgman to see me.

"Buttercup yellow, chiffon velvet!" she gasped. "I've always dreamed of owning a frock like that!"

"Well, if you like this well enough, you shall have one like it for your very own," Madame assured her.

I lifted the bouffant skirt a trifle, so she could see the way the hem was finished. The velvet was scalloped, and from beneath it protruded a sheer layer of yellow georgette [illegible].

The round, low neckline was also [illegible] with a narrow layer of yellow georgette, and this in turn was edged with a band of sable. A bow of sable appeared at the slender [illegible].

"Fur and velvet are my idea of [illegible]," Miss Hodgman declared [illegible] the frock."

ODD FACTS

Eiffel tower is 984 feet high and is by far the highest artificial structure in the world. Its base covers nearly two and a half acres. The structure was built as one of the attractions of the Paris exposition of 1889 and was two years in building. The contract was given to the famous engineer, Alexandre Eiffel. The tower cost nearly $1,000,000, $292,000 of which was furnished by the French government and the remainder by Eiffel, who was given the profits from the tower for twenty years. Admission receipts from the public almost paid for the structure the first year. There is a meteorological observatory in the tower, besides scientific laboratories and a wireless station.

The first Atlantic cable was laid in 1858 under the auspices of a British company. Two vessels, one American and the other English, proceeded with parts of the cable to mid ocean. There the ends of the cable were joined and the ships steamed in opposite directions, one to Newfoundland and the other to Ireland. Over 140 miles of the cable was lost owing to a double break. The first message sent over the cable was as follows: "Europe and America are united by telegraph. Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and good-will toward men." By using currents with too high potential the cable was soon impaired and in a few months became useless. The next cable was laid in 1865, but was unsuccessful for several years.

IN THE LINCOLN CHURCHES

LINCOLN COUNCIL OF CHURCHES.

The large supply of peace plan ballots for the Lincoln churches came this week and were distributed as widely as possible. Any organization wishing a supply may obtain them by applying to the council secretary at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Arrangements have been made thru the council for Judge W. M. Morning to speak at Elm Park Methodist church, Sunday evening at the regular service hour, 7:30.

The women's department met Tuesday. Arrangements for the observance of the national day of prayer for missions were referred to a committee. A committee appointed some time ago to purchase books on missions reported the names of the volumes secured and announced that the books are ready for placement in the city library. A list of the volumes will be furnished each missionary society.

Mrs. E. L. Hinman was appointed chairman of a committee instructed to draw up a resolution urging our senators and secretary Hughes to bring about United States cooperation in the movement for the repatriation of the Armenian people, wherever they are.

Mrs. George Coryell was appointed chairman of the department of local work and as such she will head the "Committee of One Thousand" who will be the special promoters of a greatly enlarged summer church school program for 1924.

The department of religious education met this noon at the Grand hotel to receive the report of the committee appointed to prepare the material for a leaflet announcing the church schools for the summer session 1924. C. L. Vessey outlined the Christian citizenship program of boy's classes in the church schools, in which plan the problem is quite successfully solved of coordinating the work of all the agencies interested in boy life.

Advance Spring Modes

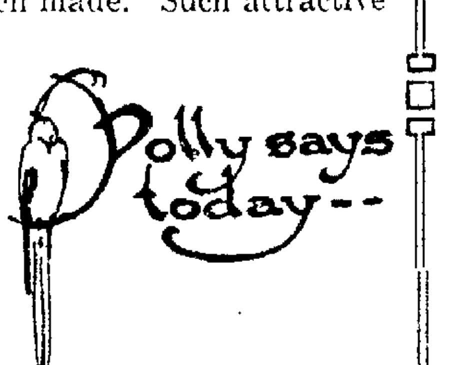

IT is like the surprise boxes of early childhood days, this awaiting the opening of the great cases of new spring garments. Interest is so intense that one can scarcely wait until the beautiful modes are before one's very eyes, and the full charm of the new styles is thoroly grasped. New suits, new coats, new dresses, new shoes, new blouses, new hats—see the new now! An unexpected number of sales have already been made. Such attractive modes are bound to draw admirers quickly.

Spring Hats

THE hand made hat is much in evidence. Sectional crowns, confetti appliques, elaborated flowers of ribbons, lace in combination, hand embroideries—everything to contribute to the daintiness and smartness of the new spring hats is here. Especial displays this week of black and white hats.

Prices range 6.50 to 25.00

A Long Suit

Every woman has some "long suit," but to be really fashionable she must have the newest "Ensemble Suit" with the long, beltless coat. These three-piece models are the last word from "the Avenue." With their high Mandarin collars and long Chinese-effect box coats which may be worn separately also, they announce their smartness. The blouses too, suggest the O[illegible] with elaborate embroidered designs or colorings. Velour, Hairline Twills, etc., mostly in Navy with contrasting or self-color blouses. Priced ea. 125.00 and 135.00.

Trial for Guy Miller, of 2306 South Eighth who is charged with passing a no fund check, was continued until February 25 at 9 a. m. in Justice Stevens' court, Saturday morning. A $200 recognizance was renewed. The complaint was filed November 26 by J. F. Prucha who alleged the boy gave him a check for $68.55. It was first presented in Justice Hawes' court but Miller asked for a change of venue and the case was transferred to the other peace court.

The supreme court has recently been disposing of a number of appeals in foreclosure cases on motion. In many of these cases the appeal is taken by the land owner in the hope that before the sale is confirmed he can redeem his property, and as it is usually two years before an appeal case is reached he has along time in which to hope that his fortune may be bettered. Recently, however, a number of these appeals have been disposed of by motions to dismiss based on the allegation that the record does not warrant the appeal, followed by a court order sustaining the motion.

C. E. V. Smith of Furnas county has appealed to the supreme court from a district court judgment that denied him recovery on a tornado policy on the home of J. T. Stevenson, taken out in the Nebraska National Fire Insurance company Smith had a mortgage on the property, and held the policy as security. The Hendley bank foreclosed a mortgage that it held and the property was sold in this way about a month before the tornado hit the house. The insurance company defended largely on the ground that it had not been notified of the foreclosure proceedings while they were in progress and that under the provisions of the policy it was not in force at the time of the tornado.

Tom Edwards of Benkleman is seeking a reversal in supreme court of a judgment he got in Dundy county district court for $233.18 against the Westchester Fire Insurance company of New York, when he wanted $1763.70. He held a mortgage on a grocery store in Benkleman operated by Walker Stodsgill, and held a $3,000 policy as security. The company tried to prove a claim that the fire was of incendiary origin and that it owed nothing. It was unsuccessful in this, but it did convince the jury that the stock had been much run down and that only a few hundred dollars worth was left when the fire came along. The town marshal testified that when he

The condition of C. D. Traphagen, who sustained an injury to his head from a fall following a fainting spell in the lobby of the First National bank Friday afternoon, was said to be unchanged Saturday noon. Mr. Traphagen sustained a skull fracture of a rather serious nature, but Dr. Hilton said the condition of the patient was not alarming and that recovery should follow.

Miss Helen Gregory of New York, who has been in Lincoln for about ten days, will leave for Kansas Monday afternoon. Miss Gregory is one of three supervisors of an organization with headquarters in New York, which places visiting teachers in school systems. The salary of the visiting teacher is paid by the national organization during a demonstration period of three years, but after that the work is expected to be taken over by the schools. Miss Gregory says twenty-seven cities now have a visiting teacher and that three more teachers are being placed this month. Miss Gregory is on a tour of inspection which will take her over a large district extending from Florida, Birmingham, Ala., Tucson, Ariz., to the Pacific coast. In Lincoln she has been combining a visit to relatives and her old time home, with conferences with a visiting teacher placed in the city last fall. This is the second visiting teacher sent to Lincoln in the two years this city has been on the list.

Prof. Joseph Alexis of the modern language department of the University of Nebraska left for New York Friday afternoon, expecting to sail soon for Spain. He will be absent until September 1 Professor Alexis will be located chiefly at Madrid, where he will devote himself to study of the Spanish language, customs and literature. This will be his second visit to Spain within three or four years. He has also in that period spent considerable time in Mexico and Cuba. Mrs. Alexis will take her two children to Raymond, Neb., to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Odman, during the remainder of the cold season. In the spring she will join her husband in Spain, leaving the children with their grandparents.

Mr. Becker was married June 9, 1878 to Miss Maria Klockmeyer. To this union six children were born, three boys and three girls, all living. They are: Carl H., Henry J., Christion C., Anna M. Henrietta, and Mrs Mary Schmidt of Holyoke, Col. There are fifteen grandchildren.

Mr. Becker became a member of the church in his early youth. He was baptised and confirmed in 1867 when fourteen years old.

The body is being held at Castle, Roper and Mathews pending funeral services.

Grand Island Chamber Elects.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Jan 26—At its annual meeting the Chamber of Commerce of this city elected as directors the following twenty-five members: Edward Brown, A. J. Denman, E. W. Augustine, J. A. Donald, J. L. Cleary, Glenn Jones, C. H. Menck, E. J. Wolbach, J. R. Geddes, George Cowton, T. A. Guttridge, David Kaufman, C. T. Flower, C. H. Justice, C. F. Tully, F. J. Coates, Wm. Krehmke, O. W. Mcracken, Homer Bowen, T. H. Fritte, V. E. Evans, I. R. Alter, Robert Tevietdale, Emil Roeser, and Harry Faidley. These directors will meet at once and select a president, commissioner and rate expert. The chamber voted to continue the department established last year, presided over by E. P. Ryan, rate expert, whose name is mentioned in connection with the republican nomination for state railway commissioner and it is expected that he will be retained by the chamber unless it should be found that a state wide campaign would interfere with such duties.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT A MODEL.

PARIS. (By mail)—The features of Quentin Roosevelt, as symbolizing the American spirit during the war, have been selected by M. Maxime Real del Sarte, sculptor and a disabled French veteran, for perpetuation in the commemorative monument to the French and Americans who fell during the fighting in the Champagne region. The monument will be erected on the site of what was Navarin farm, famous in military operations.

WASHINGTON (By mail)—Probably no other woman in the world knows so much about coins and coinage as Miss Mary O'Reilly, assistant director of the United States mint. Miss O'Reilly has been employed in the office of the director of the mint for nearly twenty years and on numerous occasions has been in supreme charge.

COOLIDGE ORDERS SEARCH OF RECORDS

mittee predicted that Fall, convicted already of having lied several times in his testimony will be too sick to testify Monday.

Spends a Restless Night.

At Zevely's house it was stated this morning that Fall spent "a very restless night." A nurse was in attendance all night and another went on duty this morning. Dr. John Wharton, Fall's physician, was to see the patient this morning.

These developments were in prospect today in advance of the senate committee's meeting at 2 p. m.

1—Disclosure by Archie Roosevelt and G. D. Wahlberg, former employes of Harry Sinclair, of the full story of the "$68,000 cancelled checks" or the "six or eight cows" which Wahlberg and Roosevelt had a conversation about before the both resigned from Sinclair's employ.

2—Possible decision by the senate committee to put one and possibly two members of the cabinet on the witness stand.

3—Probable examination of Senator Smoot, Utah, by the committee on a number of points including his reason for opposing the swearing of Fall when the latter testified before the committee.

4—An intimation that if Fall ever takes the stand again, he will deny he got the $100,000 E. L. Doheny told the committee he loaned Fall.

5—Warning by Senator Walsh, leader of the investigation, that unless Harry Sinclair returns voluntarily from Europe to answer questions, his brother will be put on the stand.

The probable questioning of Smoot who is a member of the committee and of the two cabinet officers, Denby, secretary of the navy, and Daugherty, attorney general, excited more interest than impending development except the appearance of Fall himself.

Senator Walsh wants to know why Fall was not put under oath when he testified the first time. It was then that he said emphatically he never got a cent from Doheny, Sinclair or anyone connected with either—testimony which has since been contradicted by Doheny and Zevely, Sinclair's man.

Had Fall been under oath when he made this statement, the matter would have been more serious. As it is, he was merely "mistaken."

Smoot, who at the time was chairman of the committee, said he didn't think it was necessary to swear Fall.

May Question Smoot.

If Smoot is called to the stand, he will be asked to give the reason he requested Doheny to "see me alone in my office after you've testified." Smoot passed a note to that effect to Doheny when the latter was before the committee the other day and then explained he wanted to ask Doheny about a "wild cat" oil tip Doheny was looking into. This explanation does not satisfy Walsh.

Doheny and Daugherty, however, had official connection with the leasing of the naval oil reserves and for that reason it is likely both will be asked to tell the committee under oath whether any evidence came to their knowledge that would indicate anything irregular or wrong from the leasing deals.

The white house statement that President Coolidge believes there may have been "criminal action" and that it will be punished, has convinced government circles that there will be no letup in the probe.

Archie Roosevelt, son of the former president, and G. D. Wahlberg, former personal secretary to Sinclair, was called back to the witness stand today at the request of Senator Smoot.

Roosevelt previously testified that Wahlberg had told him of suspicions that all was not right with a certain $68,000 cancelled checks, said to have been written by Sinclair. Wahlberg denied this and said he only mentioned "six or eight cows" instead of $68,000 and that he never mentioned cancelled checks.

Senators expect that re-examination of Roosevelt and Wahlberg will reveal a "new sensational story" and ascertain the true significance of the check.

The United Press learned that some members of the investigating committee have been reliably informed that Fall, who is now ill in Washington, "will never admit" he took $100,000 from Doheny on a personal unsecured note.

Some of the investigators also are determined to trace the authorship of a mysterious document purporting to tell whether Fall got $100,000. This was handed to Senator Walsh recently by a clerk of the committee and all efforts to ascertain where it came from have proved unavailing.

President Coolidge has ordered the department of the interior to investigate the leases of the naval oil reserve lands to see if they should be annulled, it was learned at the white house today.

The action followed revelations in the senate inquiry of which the president is being kept informed by department of justice representatives. A complete statement of the president's views on the Teapot Dome scandal will be made as soon as all the facts have been brought out by the senate inquiry, it was announced at the white house.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 26—"President Coolidge and I have a distinct understanding about the attitude of the department of justice." Attorney General Daugherty, commenting on the senate investigation of Tiapot Dome and other oil leases, declared here today.

"The interests of the government will be fully protected," Daugherty added.

"The political aspects of the oil lease inquiry will not affect the department's attitude in the slightest."

SKINNER'S WIFE COMPLAINS

In Seeking Divorce Omaha Woman Bares Secrets.

OMAHA, Jan. 26. Lloyd Skinner president and manager of the Skinner Manufacturing company left his home and took rooms at Hotel Fontenelle while his two sons were ill and refused to contribute to their support according to testimony of Mrs. Eda M. Skinner who is suing him for divorce and who appeared before District Judge Day Friday morning.

Mrs. Skinner was fashionably dressed. She explained that she and Mr. Skinner were married in Detroit on October 31, 1913, and that they have resided in Omaha for eight years, first at Hotel Blackstone, and later at 3816 Harney street.

"Six or seven months after we were married Mr. Skinner became domineering and made everybody unhappy and nervous," continued Mrs Skinner, under the examination of her attorney. "He gradually grew worse until it impared the health of the children and myself. We began to fear that the tiniest thing on earth would irritate him. He complained if the meal was not on the table just when he arrived home and if there was not a great deal to eat at every meal. He even found fault with the silverware and threw it away. And he was profane to every one in the household including the maid.

IS GUILTY OF PERJURY

Baptist Minister Is Sentenced to Serve Two Years in Prison.

GEORGETOWN, Tex., Jan 26—Rev. A. A. Davis, Baptist minister, was found guilty of perjury in district court today and sentenced to serve two years in prison.

Rev. Mr. Davis' conviction resulted from his testimony before the grand jury investigating the flogging of R. W. Burleson. A jury held the minister had committed perjury before the grand jury in denying he delivered a note to Burleson signed "Georgetown Klan Number 178 K. K. K." a few days before the man was tarred, feathered and flogged.

DECATUR GIRL DISAPPEARS

DECATUR, Neb., Jan. 26.—Jessie McCluskey, sixteen-year-old high school girl, daughter of prominent local citizens, has disappeared. No trace has been found of her after she cashed a small check at Blair, Neb. Members of the American Legion post have gone to Omaha to search for her. Her parents are heartbroken.

In Favor of Union Pacific.

FREMONT, Neb., Jan. 26—An appeal to the district court saved the Union Pacific railroad $75 judgment ordered in justice court for the death of a cow owned by Lloyd E. Walter, Dodge county farmer.

The cow broke thru the fence from her pasture and wandered to the tracks of the U. P. A train came along and the cow went to the heaven where all good cows are supposed to go. Walter claimed the cow would not have strayed onto the tracks if the company had erected barriers sufficient to keep off all trespassers. The railroad countered with the claim that it was not the fault of the company that the cow happened to wander from its own field. The jury upheld the railroad's claims and the verdict of the lower court was reversed.

Three Missouri Valley Basketball Games On Schedule

GAME HERE HOLDS MOST OF INTEREST

Undefeated Kansans Arrive for Battle With Huskers at Coliseum—Two Games Played Friday Night.

SATURDAY NIGHT GAMES.
Kansas vs. Nebraska at coliseum 7:30 p. m.
Kansas Aggies vs Oklahoma at Norman.
Grinnell vs. Washington at St. Louis.

Of the three games on the Missouri valley conference schedule for Saturday night, the feature conflict will be staged at the coliseum when Coach F. C. Allen sends his undefeated Kansas university five against the Huskers. The Kansans haven't lost a game in thirty-one starts. Coach Kline's quintet insist that the Jayhawker record is about to be smeared.

Friday night saw a pair of bitterly contested games fought on conference courts. The Missouri Tigers won their second conference victory of the week by defeating Grinnell, 22 to 19, at Columbus. The half ended with Coach Bond's Missourians holding the scant majority of 14 to 13 and it was not until the final two minutes of play that the Tigers were able to get their three-point margin. It was a see-saw battle from start to finish.

Ames Wins Over Drake.

Much the same sort of a game took place at Ames, where the Cyclones finally edged out on the Drake quintet, 18 to 17. Ames had a 15-8 advantage at the half but the Bulldogs began taking up the slack in the second half and before the game ended had almost succeeded in getting out in front.

Rough play featured the game, according to the report of it, partly due to the intense rivalry between the two universities. This was Ames' first victory in three years over Drake on the Ames court. Jacobs and Young were the main cogs in the Ames machine while Captain Bill Boelter, recently returned after a threatened attack of appendicitis, was the outstanding player in the Drake lineup.

Coach Allen of Kansas was forced to cut his squad to eight players on account of final examinations which began at the Sunflower institution Thursday.

Kansans All in the Pink.

"Unless the unexpected happens before Saturday night," says Coach Allen, "we will enter the game against Nebraska in the best psysical condition thus far this season. One or two of my men were suffering from effects of flu in the Nebraska game here and also in the game against the Aggies at Manhattan last Tuesday. Kansas will have no alibis to present after the Cornhusker battle, no matter what the result."

E. C. Quigley will referee the game. Here is the manner in which the two teams will probably start:

Doane Eleven Has Fancy Grid Slate

CRETE, Neb., Jan. 26.—The 1924 Doane college football schedule has been completed by Coach H. J. Nossek and includes a game with the St. Benedict eleven at Atchison, Kas. The grid program is one of the stiffest schedules that the Tigers have ever faced. The card includes nine games, six of them being played away from home. The schedule:

October 3—Cotner at Crete.
October 11—Hastings at Crete.
October 17—Nebraska Central at Central City.
October 24—Peru at Peru.
October 31—Grand Island at Crete.
November 7—York at York.
November 15—Kearney at Kearney.
November 21—St. Benedict at Atchison, Kas.
November 27—Midland at Fremont.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Basketball

VITAL POINTS IN DEVELOPING ATTACK

I. HAVE MORE MEN IN ATTACK THAN IN DEFENSE.
II. USE STRATEGY.
III. PERFECT PASSING IN OPEN.
IV. PASS BALL SO THAT OPPONENTS CANNOT REACH IT EASILY.
V. PASS BALL SO THAT PLAYERS CAN RECEIVE IT WHILE IN MOTION.
VI. PASS TO MAN IN BEST POSITION FOR TOSS

What vital points must be considered in developing an attack?

Answered by
DR. JAMES NAISMITH.

The inventor of the game, who has done more or further it than any other one man alive. University of Kansas.

When in possession of the ball, have more men in the attack than there are in the defense. Two players can outwit one: three, two, etc. The five men offense was originated to get five men going against four. This led to the five men defense in order to meet this development.

Open up a point from which you can score by drawing the defense away by threats at other points.

Pass the ball into the open in such a way that your player can reach it first, either by automatic action or by signals.

Pass the ball in such a way that your player can reach it more easily than the opponent; if possible, so that he is between the ball and his opponent.

Pass the ball in such a way that if your player is in motion he does not need to slow up to catch the ball.

Pass it in such a way that he will be in the best possible position to make his next move, whether it be to throw a goal or to make another pass. Practice the men in passing and catching the ball so that it may be passed so rapidly that the opponents cannot intercept it.

Midland Prepares for Cotner Scrap

FREMONT, Neb., Jan. 25.—Coach Speer's Midland basketball squad, inspired by the overwhelming victory over Kearney Normal, is working hard in anticipation of the next game with Cotner which comes to Fremont Monday evening.

The Cotnerites have a fast aggregation of veterans this season and will offer stiff competition for the Fremonters. Midland has thus far played three conference games, losing to Wesleyan and winning from Kearney and Omaha University.

Coach Speer, last year's mentor at Peru Normal, which finished in a tie for the conference championship, has strong hopes for his newly adopted proteges. Though the team is lacking in veterans, the basket shooters are rounding into mid-season form and display a clever brand of teamwork. They held the speedy Haskell Indian five to a close game in the first contest of the season.

All But Four Chi Cubs Sign Contracts

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—All members but four of the Chicago Cubs have signed contracts, William Veeck, president of the club, announced. He refused to name the holdouts, but it was believed they consisted of Vic Aldridge, Charlie Hollocher, and two recruits.

AMERICA HANGS UP VICTORY IN GAMES

CHAMONIX, France, Jan. 26—America's colors, as the winner of the first event of the 1924 Olympic games, were run up on the flagstaff here today.

Charles Jewtraw, of Lake Placid, the big sprint star of the American team, won the 500 meters ice skating race, the first event on the 1924 program.

The race was contested against time and Jewtraw won first place with the fast time of 44 seconds.

Oscar Olsen, of Norway, finished second with a mark of 44 1-5 seconds; Thunberg of Finland, and Larson, of Norway, finished in a tie for third place in the time of 44 4-5 seconds.

Big Cheer for Americans.

Great enthusiasm prevailed when the games actually started. Celebrities from all over Europe, wintering at the fashionable resorts in the vicinity, were in the stands when the call was sounded and the first of the athletes came out of their club houses. When the American team appeared in white sweaters and tights with the neat United States emblem shining on their breasts, a great cheer went up. It had been feared that the Americans would not compete.

The controversy that arose when the committee announced that each team could have only two rubbers and trainers in the dressing rooms was settled when William Taylor, manager of the American team, said: "We'll go out and win without a trainer if necessary."

The Americans had contended they should be permitted to use as many trainers as they saw fit, as there is no provision to the contrary in the rules.

Moore's Speed Astounds.

Before going to the starting line for the first heat, the American team took a couple of fast turns around the course and the speed of young Moore astounded some of the visitors.

He was given a great cheer when he glided up to the starting line and an ovation when up when he finished first with a terrific burst of speed.

William Steinmetz, of Chicago, was the only American who failed to win his heat. He finished second behind Epsen, of Norway, in the twelfth heat. The time was 44 1-5. The thirteenth heat was won by Bloomquist, of Sweden, in 45 1-5 seconds, and the fourteenth was won by Thunberg of Sweden, in 44 4-5 seconds.

Skutnab, of Finland, won the tenth heat in 46 2-5 seconds and Vellenus, Finland, won the eleventh heat in 45 seconds.

Larson of Norway, won the sixteenth heat in 44 4-5 seconds and Jewtraw made his winning time of 44 in the fifteenth heat against Gorman of Canada.

With the exception of Jewtraw, the Americans did not do so well in the first event. Joe Moore's time placed him seventh, and Kaskey was eighth, and Stenimetz fourteenth.

Gorman, the Canada star, finished second.

Lincoln Volley Ball Team Beats Omahans

The Lincoln business men's volley ball team, captained by Dr. F. A. Pierson, won four out of five games from the Omaha volley-ball team in a special match played on the Y. M. C. A. floor. Friday night. The scores were 10-15, 15-10, 15-2, 15-9 and 15-10. The members of the winning team are Dr. F. A. Pierson, A. B. Nebelsick, F. W. Albrecht, E. V. Giesler, E. L. Farmer and H. H. Jacobsen.

BASKET-BALL

Waverly Hi Trims Eagle Five.

Waverly defeated Eagle high by a score of 30 to 17 on the Waverly floor Friday night. The score at the end of the first half was 12 to 9 in favor of Waverly. Lodge was the high point man for the winners, scoring six field goals. Todd was a close second with three field goals and two free throws. McMaster and Trumble starred for Eagle scoring eleven and six points respectively.

Scottsbluff Five Takes Two.

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., Jan. 25.—Scottsbluff's high school cagsters romped away with a pair of wins this week taking Torrington, Wyoming to an 18 to 14 cleaning and the Mitchell quintet to a 20 to 14 lacing. The Scottsbluff five is coached by Harry Howarth, former Cornhusker football star.

Valentine Is Still Undefeated.

VALENTINE, Neb., Jan. 25.—Valentine lunged one step further toward the Northwestern championship by defeating the fast Chadron quintet on the home floor, 26 to 8. Chadron failed to register in the score column in the last half. The Valentine guards played a great game and smothered the Chadron forwards every time they were within scoring distance. The defeat was the first of the season for Chadron, leaving Valentine the only undefeated five in the league.

Holdrege Wins from McCook.

HOLDREDGE, Neb., Jan. 26.—Holdrege beat McCook in the last two minutes of play, 21 to 18, in a game played here. McCook held the lead up to the last two minutes when Holdrege took Johnson out and sent Hawker in. Hawker three three field goals winning the game. Ragan high school lost to the Holdrege reserves, 18 to 13.

Albion Wins Close Game.

ALBION, Neb., Jan. 26.—Albion nosed out a 28 to 27 victory over Genoa in a game played here. The first two quarters ended in a deadlock. It was Genoa's first defeat of the season.

Scotia Girls Win Again.

SCOTIA, Neb., Jan. 26.—Scotia high school's girls basketball team added another victory to its list by defeating Dennebrog in a game played there Friday, 14 to 13. The local team has not been defeated this season.

Broken Bow Beats Ansley.

BROKEN BOW, Neb., Jan. 26.—Broken Bow high school won from Ansley at basketball Friday night, 33 to 6. The local team piled up its big majority in the first half.

Halt Plan to Raise Funds for Islanders

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Jan. 26.—A project designed to aid the Grand Island baseball association in cleaning up its indebtedness of last year has been nipped in the bud by both the action of the retail merchants, in disapproving of the arrangement, because of the lack of economy in it, and also because the promoters were notified by County Attorney William Suhr that prosecution would follow any attempt to continue the project. It was to have been an indoor circus, of a week's run, each season ticket being a lottery ticket for an automobile raffle. The board of directors of the baseball association, three of the five members of which them selves disapproved of the project, is makinge very effort to resore his mony to every purchaser of a ticket so far solicited. This has been the first gesture, by any local officials against gambling, in Grand Island for many years. There has been much complaint, not only in ministerial but in other circles, of a letting down of the bars with respect to this law.

HYSTERIA DEVELOPS IN BOXING CRUSADE

BY HARRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Everything that could be said about boxing and plenty can be said without going to the extremes that were approached, was dragged out during the recent hysteria that the politicians caused in New York.

Considering that the game was going as good in New York as it ever has gone any place, it was unfair to start a lot of agitation about something that might happen or could happen.

It was most noticeable that the politicians had no real cause for an offensive against the sport and it was later brought out that it was just a case of the hungry, howling for some of the spoils.

The section of the boxing law which permitted the referee and the two judges to give a decision at the end of a bout that did not result in a knockout, it was said was all wrong and should be repealed.

Gamblers Approach Judges.

Judges, it was insinuated, could be approached by gamblers and persuaded or influenced to give a decision the way the gamblers wanted it to be given.

The boxing commissioner of New Jersey, when it was proposed that the no-decision law in Jersey be changed to provide for the giving of decisions, came out frankly in opposition to the proposal and said that he couldn't get honest officials.

It would seem that if state officials can secure employes of other state departments who are willing to work for their salaries alone, that some honest boxing officials certainly could be found in the state.

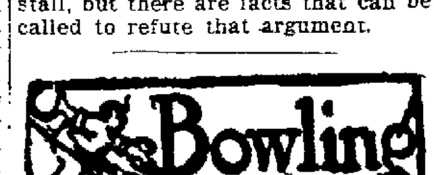

Pennsylvania, after a trial of boxing on a sort of "home rule" basis, decided to recognize it as a state sport and passed a law providing for decisions.

Promoters in New Jersey, it is said, are prepared to lobby against a decision law on the grounds that the purses demanded by boxers for taking the chance on a decision would make it prohibitive for them and they would have to ask the public to support interior matches.

Some of the Pennsylvania promoters voiced the same objections to the decision law there and it has been noticed that some of the $3 cards in Philadelphia, on which two and three champions appeared, are not being staged now.

The argument that bad decisions are not possible when no decisions can be given is very sound, of course but there are as many chances for corruption when decisions are forced from unofficial sources.

It always has been argued that no-decision bouts encourage boxers to stall, but there are facts that can be called to refute that argument.

The Lincoln Alleys, Western Brick and Supply and Reliable Grocers won the bowling matches in the Booster league games rolled on the Lincoln alleys Friday night. John Kissler, Shogo Lithia pin smasher, was high man with 604.

The Dempster Mills bowling aggregation of Beatrice will roll a special match with the Dierks-Drumm five on the Lincoln alleys at 8:00 p. m. Saturday night.

In a special match at the Y. M. C. A. alleys, the Lincoln Packers trounced the newly organized "Y" Dormitory outfit, 2053 to 2086. Friday night's scores.

LINCOLN HIGH WINS FROM YORK QUINT

YORK, Neb., Jan. 25.—Lincoln high's undefeated basketball quintet nosed out York high, 26 to 24, in the fastest game played on the York court this season. Coach Hubka's athletes led at the half, 14 to 12.

"Jug" Brown caged five field baskets and three free tosses for thirteen points and the high score honors. Kahler, Red and Black guard, took second high with a trio of baskets and Warde followed with a pair of tosses.

Helzer, York pivot man, starred for the losers with five field tallies and three free throws. Captain Sprague with six counters was second. Absence of Ostbloom, star York forward, who became ineligible last week, having passed the twenty-one year mark, weakened the Blue and Gold's offense.

Captain Corrick and Kahler were all over the floor and smothered the York forwards but Helzer. Ernie Hubka's star center slipped thru the defense and kept the York total on the climb. The lineup and summary:

Havelock Hi Trims Uni Place Quint

Havelock high's basket tossers stepped into the limelight by trimming University Place high, 17 to 16, in a hard fought battle waged on the shoptown court Friday night. Havelock led at the half, 7-3.

Miller, Havelock guard was high point man for the winning team with three field counters and a lone free toss. Wageman and Straka, with a pair of baskets each, divided second honors. Captain McLaughlin, Havelock, played a stellar game at guard and prevented the suburban forwards from running wild.

Warren, star center on the Uni Place five was high for the losers with four field baskets and one free throw. In a preliminary game the Havelock girls trounced the Wahoo girls, 25 to 10. The summary:

NEBRASKA SWIMMER BREAKS A. A. U. MARK

Norman Plate Lowers Record in 100-Yard Breast Stroke During Meet Which Huskers Drop to Omaha A. C.

OMAHA, Jan. 26.—The University of Nebraska swimmers left Omaha this morning with the short end of the score of a dual tank meet held with the Omaha Athletic club Friday night, the Omaha tanksters winning by the score of 47 to 21. The winged swimmers of the O. A. C. won seven firsts in eight events and smashed two records. One record was ruined by a Husker member.

Norman Plate, University of Nebraska swimmer, was the only Husker who was able to cop an event from the athletic club splashers. Plate easily won first place in the 100-yard breast stroke and when he kicked over the tape first established a new mid-western A. A. U. record of 1:09 for this event, beating the old mark by 9 3-5 seconds. The Omaha Athletic club swimmers won the 200-yard relay fancy diving, 50-yard free style, 220-yard free style, plunge for distance, 150-yard back stroke and 100-yard free style and broke two records.

The performance of Plate was easily the feature of the evening's events. The summary:

Bulldogs Trounce Doane Tiger Five

Cotner defeated Doane in a close game on the Bethany court Friday night by a score of 12 to 8. The game was slow and the score was close most of the time. Both sides committed many personal fouls. Neither side could throw the free throws with any effectiveness.

R. Borgaard, the Bulldog center, started the score by throwing a long one from the floor. Manning added a point for Cotner by a free throw. In a few minutes, Bryan put Doane in the scoring column by throwing a free goal. Stearns snared a field goal for Cotner. Gausman and Witzell got a field goal each. The score at the half was tied at 5-5.

The lanky Bulldog center, R. Borgaard, was high point man of the evening with three field goals and WAYNE, Neb., Jan. 25.—Wayne state college took a fast extra period game, 28 to 25, from Kearney state here tonight. Wayne held a one point lead up to the last thirty seconds of play, when a free throw by Franck tied the score. In the extra period Wayne caged three field goals and Kearney one field toss and a free throw. Best, Wayne captain, continues to lead conference scorers, running his total to 86 by casting 7 goals. Holland was high point man for Kearney.

Tex Rickard's "Champions and Chance"

THE STORY OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST PROMOTER

How I Made $500,000.

One of the first men to buy a drink in our bar and gambling house at Nome on that famous Fourth of July opening was an old fellow with long whiskers.

"Fill 'em up, boy," he ordered, waving his arm to include everybody in the house.

All drinks were 50 cents a throw, and they could take what they liked, whisky, gin, brandy or wine.

The price didn't bother anybody in those days. The old man slapped his poke—a small bag of gold dust—on the bar and untied the string.

"Weigh her up," he directed me, and let's have another one."

The two rounds came to about 5[illegible] dollars. Come to think of it, the present prices don't look so high at that, when I think of those Klondike days.

I weighed the gold. He had close [illegible] pounds and I came to some[illegible] like $120[illegible]. We kept a pair of [illegible] back of the bar. [illegible] was $16 and we had the subdivisions figured out so exact that we could make change in gold dust down to [illegible] cents.

"Put the rest of it away for me boy," the old miner ordered, "I'll get it when I come back."

[illegible]

Profits in Four Years $500,000.

That first night as I have said wound up with our safe showing [illegible] gold dust [illegible]

The receipts fell off a little the next two days. That year, tho, I cleared for myself $100,000. My profits for four years out of the Nome establishment were close to $500,000. That wasn't on paper, either. It was all in virgin gold. And I had started on $35!

To show you how strong the play was the first week or two, my original partner sold out at the end of ten days for $10,000. Why, talk about people being amazed at the offer of $1[illegible] for a prize fight in New York city or Reno—that much could have been guaranteed any time for a fight up in Alaska right in our saloon and gaming house on one day's notice. And there wouldn't have been any monkey business about it, either. It would have been gold—not certified checks.

One afternoon I was knocking about the place, watching the fellows play against the faro bank, when I saw an old man with long [illegible] and whiskers gray heard speak [illegible] and walk away de[illegible]. He walked over to a bench and sat there with head bowed. I moved over to the bar.

"What's the matter with the old man?" I asked. "What did he want?"

"He's broke and wanted me to give him a drink."

"You turned him down did you?"

"Yes, he's already had two and I thought maybe he'd get too much."

I went over to the old man. [illegible] and staring blankly at [illegible]

"What's [illegible] old timer, [illegible] money?"

"Nope. [illegible] broke. Lost it all last [illegible]"

"No, you're not," I told him. "I've got your gold. You gave it to me to put in the safe."

I found his poke and handed it to him. He had [illegible] a thousand dollars worth of gold left in it, had forgotten all about it.

He Comes Back Flush

He was a very grateful old man. It [illegible] I have been all the same, tho if it hadn't been there. He didn't know and would never have kicked.

In a few minutes he was buying for the house again. Finally he wandered out into the cold.

Six months later the old man came in again and he was worth $200,000. He had made one of the strikes. Yes and he left a lot of that with me, too.

I hope I haven't created the impression that the men who dug out all this gold got away from the Yukon with it. On the contrary, they rarely went out with anything. The bulk of it went into the general development of Alaska. When a man made a strike he would usually put his profits right back in the ground, buying other claims that didn't pan out.

I have said that I made close to $500,000 in four years. I never had that much at once. Just like the other prospectors I would trade in claims. There was nothing else to do with the gold. There was no fun in seeing it piled up in the safe. We had to have some kind of action.

Tho I made one fortune after another I don't believe I had over $5[illegible],000 when I finally came out for good to take a fly at the Nevada fields.

One rainy day up at Nome a soldier came into my place. Walking up to the bar he handed me a yellow envelope, wet and partly torn. He was from a camp of regulars stationed on the Nome beach—a tidal beach, that belonged to the United States public land.

"Weigh that for me, will you?" he asked. "Tell me what it is."

In a corner of the envelope I saw a small amount of pure fine gold. It was as fine as pulverized sugar—the finest of all gold.

I put it on the scales and it came to sixty cents.

"Where did you get that?" I asked.

The Great Nome Discovery

"Why, down on the beach," he said. "I was fooling around and saw some of it on some clay bed rock. Just for fun I washed it out. Mount to anything?"

In about five minutes a dozen men were around looking at the flour gold.

All it amounted to was that in two days I didn't have a bartender—not a soul, even, to help run the roulette wheel and the faro layout. I was alone.

That soldier had made the famous Nome beach strike. For months miners had been going thru the mountains and here was a wealth of gold right at their feet. Many of them were actually camped on the fortunes that they had been seeking. The beach was strewn with gold dust for ten miles. It had washed down from the mountains in some past era and the tidal waters had gradually exposed it.

There was a general stampede. My bartenders became miners. Any one of them could go down there on the beach and rock out one hundred dollars' worth of gold in a day. Some would rock out a thousand. All they needed was a plain little rocker, a sort of small box like a dish tray that sits on rockers and can be moved backward and forward until the dirt is washed away from the pure gold dust.

Most of the gold was found on clay bed rock where it would stick together better than in the sand. The land belonged to everybody. It could not be staked out. Anybody had a right to go there and get what he could. [illegible] did form a sort of agreement that each man was to designate what section he was working and his space was [illegible] to him.

Hundreds of miners came out of the mountains and worked the beach. Millions of dollars came out of that sand. The Nome beach strike was one of the most famous gold rushes in the history of Alaska. I have just told how it started—that soldier with his wet envelope and his sixty cents worth of pure flour gold.

After that the fight game was calling me, but I did not know it.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

GOVERNOR IS STILL LOST

FAILS TO APPEAR BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE

George E Johnson Takes Center of Stage and Tells Tale On Senator Banning at the Hearing

[illegible] Governor Bryan [illegible] George E Johnson former [illegible] of the department of public works [illegible] held the center of the stage Friday afternoon The governor had been notified that his personal presence would be welcomed to clear up some things relating to alleged deficits in road fund and the Cherry county road project No 66 but he was no where to be found

It was reported he had just been seen emerging from the senatorial brush and was supposed to have lost himself in the second growth of home grown presidential timber He was not at the governor's mansion He did not appear at the governor's office during the entire day It was the third time the committee had invited the governor to testify before it

To all legal intents and purposes the governor considers the committee dead He has legal advice from J H Broady that the committee ceased to exist when the senate finally adjourned last year, that it has no power to act that the senate died intestate and its committee inherits no power Notwithstanding this Governor Bryan has recognized the committee by corresponding with it He is willing to carry on a conversation at long range but has been unable to meet the committee face to face

Senators Wilkins, Banning and Robbins, members of the committee, consider the organization a live corpse and propose to formulate a report on the condition of state and federal road funds, notwithstanding the fact that they are working for nothing and boarding themselves

At the close of the hearing Friday afternoon the committee adjourned subject to call of the chairman, Senator Robbins The committee was authorized by the senate to send for persons and papers but it has not yet attempted to force the attendance of the governor of others

George E Johnson, former state engineer and head of the department of public works, made a statement to the committee in which he answered some of the matters mentioned in the governor's last communication

What Democratic Leader Said.

Mr Banning has said he believes I ought to have made a report to the governor regarding modified road contracts" said Mr Johnson He has said my successor Mr Cochran should have made such a report. I made several reports to Governor Bryan He garbled two of them One he used as a basis for advocating a reduction of an appropriation for maintenance He said my report showed Seward county had a surplus of $20 000 when in fact it had none, not even enough to pay what it owed I believed this false basis for a reduction in maintenance for roads would not only hurt the democratic party but the road building program, and so I asked Senator Banning and Senator Purcell to go to the governor and talk to him about it

Senator Banning told me he would not go to Governor Bryan to talk to him about that or any other matter, as it would do no good, and Senator Purcell told me the same"

Senator Banning democratic member of the investigating committee smiled serenely when Mr Johnson made this statement and said nothing in reply or explanation He was floor leader of the democratic minority in the senate

city afternoon by state officers and a pint of alcohol was taken from his person It is alleged the alcohol was for a customer He was arraigned Monday morning and his hearing set for Friday He was held at the county jail until Friday afternoon

Howard O Mason filed a petition in district court Friday afternoon asking for a divorce from Violet F Mason for the reason that she had been separated from him ever since 1919 The couple were married in Boise Ia November 20 1912 On May 28 1919 by mutual agreement says Mr Mason they separated with the understanding that marriage relations were never to be resumed A property settlement was effected at that time and the parties have had nothing to do with each other since There are no children

LARGE CLASS IS GRADUTED

NINETY-EIGHT GIVEN DIPLOMAS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Midwinter Commencement Held On Friday Evening—Rev Paul C Johnston Gives the Address

About 800 people attended the commencement exercises for the winter class of '24 at Lincoln high school auditorium Friday evening The commencement address was given by Rev Paul C Johnston pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church and was entitled 'The Range Finders" The address was preceded by special music by the high school orchestra and singing by the audience Ninety eight were graduated

Rev Mr Johnston explained that the army needs range finders for their huge guns and airmen are sent up into the clouds thousands of feet from which lofty position they direct the movements of the troops below The airmen are employed to do this because the increase in elevation broadens their view enabling them to see farther

The high school student has a loftier position than the grade graduate and is able to see farther and more clearly There are three things that a man must have to be a complete success They are self reverence self reticence and self confidence The man of today must be progressive He should take pride and interest in each new invention and not be a disbeliever in progress

Man is a tiny atom compared to the universe and should never become conceited over any success that might come his way He compared man to a little child wheeling a toy wagon thru a huge cathedral The child never notices the vastness of the structure about him So a conceited man trundles his puny theories thru the cathedrals of the world—unnoticing 'Man's ignorance is a sea, his wisdom but a blot"

The high school orchestra under the direction of Charles R Righter, jr played the Spanish dance, by Moskowski, 'The Swan', by Saint-Saens' "National Honor", march by Laurendeau, and after invocation they rendered the 'Symphony in B Minor" by Shubert

The high school girls' glee club directed by H O Ferguson, sang "Morn Rise" by Czibulka "Goin' Home", by Dvorak, and "Senorita", by Dessauer

H P Shepherd principal of the high school formally presented the class and E E Henkle, president of the board of education awarded the diplomas to the class as they marched across the stage The class sang their school song and benediction was pronounced by Rev F I Travis

DR. E. ARTHUR CARR IS DEAD

LINCOLN PHYSICIAN PASSES AWAY FRIDAY NIGHT

Was Former Grand Master of the I O O F Lodge of Nebraska and Former Health Board Secretary

Dr E Arthur Carr Lincoln physician former grand master of the I O O F grand lodge of Nebraska and at one time one of the secretaries of the state board of health died at Doctor Shoemaker's hospital at 5 25 p m Friday He had been confined at the hospital for several weeks and had undergone an amputation of one of his legs in an effort to stop an infection which resulted from an accident Little hope had been held out for his recovery for the past ten days

Dr Carr was injured on Sunday December 2, at Seventeenth and B streets when a sedan in which he was riding collided with a street car at 10 p m His car was wrecked and his right leg was injured so that a blood clot formed on it He was cared for for a time at his home and later was taken to the hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the leg, but this did not stop the infection

Dr Carr had been a practicing physician in Lincoln for more than twenty years, and was well known in the city and over the state, having held a political appointive office under democratic state administration

He was appointed grand marshal of the Nebraska Odd Fellows grand lodge in 1913 was elected grand warden in 1915, was elected grand master in 1917 and was made representative to the sovereign grand lodge the following year

Was In Politics

Dr Carr was prominent in a political way and had done considerable work for the democratic party in state and local campaigns He was a staunch supporter of the Bryans and was always identified with the Bryans in all political contests

Dr Carr had a wide acquaintance and was a good mixer He was ambitious, energetic and an untiring worker

Dr Carr was born in Newton, Ia, February 20, 1872 He came with his parents to Nebraska in a covered wagon in 1878 and the family settled near what is now Shelton, in Buffalo county He later attended the Grand Island business college and was graduated He then went to the Hahnemann medical college at Chicago and graduated in 1897, after having finished a four year's course in homeopathy

He came directly to Lincoln and began the practice of medicine here opening an office at Twelfth and O streets

A daughter Florence Lucille, preceded Dr Carr in death She was born September 2, 1915, and died December 16, 1917

He was married on June 12, 1900, to Miss Florence Evelyn Fouke, of Liberty, Neb He is survived by his wife, his parents, Mr and Mrs George W Carr of Grand Island and two children, Kenneth, eighteen, a senior at Lincoln high school, and Marjory fourteen a sophomore in high school He is also survived by three sisters Mrs N G Deffenbaugh, of Fairmont Neb, Mrs W S Everhart of Grand Island, Mrs L L Hyle of St. Michael, and two brothers, Dr J M Carr of Stockton, Cal and Dr E Fred Carr of Stapleton Neb Mr Carr was a member of the Baptist church with which he united near St Michael when he was twelve years old In addition to being a member of the Odd Fellows he belonged to the M W A the Royal Highlanders Sons of Veterans and the Sons of the American Revolution and I offer no excuse he stated to Captain Anderson Keep good care of my two kids they're all I have was his only plea

Mr Cook had returned to Lincoln about a week ago from Sheridan Before going to Sheridan he was in Lincoln about six weeks at which time he met Mr [illegible] He will probably be turned over to Wyoming authorities according to the police

Copyright, 1923, by The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

CHAPTER XXVII

Things were little better during dinner. Miriam felt the strain of behaving as Anthony would want her to behave. It made her nervous to suppress her real self, and Anthony's deference to his mother made Miriam realize where she, herself, stood with him. Of course, Anthony loved her, but with him, tradition stood first. It did not occur to him to take for granted the fact that his mother must accept the new conditions; it was Miriam who must mold herself into the kind of woman Mrs. Breen wanted for Anthony's wife.

Miriam said very little. She sat in the highbacked chair eating food that it almost choked her to get down. She smiled mechanically, she answered questions when they were put to her—and things might have passed off rather well if the subject of the wedding hadn't for the moment put Miriam off her guard

"I suppose you won't want to wait," Mrs. Breen was saying. "There's no particular reason for waiting, and the fact that Miriam lives alone makes it all the more necessary for you to marry soon. I would suggest, Miriam, that you come and stay here with me. The wedding shall be from here, and after that you and Anthony can remain here or go where you please. I don't suppose you'd either of you be contented to live here."

Miriam was startled. She and Anthony had made no definite plans for the wedding, they had been content to drift, and there were many things to be settled before they could talk of marriage.

"Oh, but I couldn't do that," Miriam spoke in her ordinary tone of voice. She was once more the independent working woman capable of making her own plans. "It's very good of you, Mrs. Breen, but Anthony and I have had no chance to talk things over and make plans. I have my work to think of and I must dispose of my responsibilities before anything else. Anthony knows that."

In a minute she knew what she had done. Anthony had warned her about telling his mother of her work, and she had promised to be careful. She flushed scarlet and bit her lip nervously. At that moment she did not dare to meet Anthony's eyes, she felt as if she were caught in a trap.

"Responsibilities," Mrs. Breen was crying. "Work? Anthony, I'm afraid you have been keeping things back from me."

"That's quite true, mother," Anthony returned quickly, and, listening to him, Miriam was struck with the way his voice resembled his mother's dry cackle. She suffered a moment of revulsion, and then she forgot everything in what he was saying.

"I saw no reason for telling you about Miriam's job. I hardly thought you would approve, and, of course, she is giving up her work immediately."

Miriam turned her eyes in Anthony's direction, but he did not look at her. His face was stern and set, his voice cold and his lips were drawn into a straight line.

"And if I may ask," Mrs. Breen was saying dryly, "what is this work that your future wife is engaged in, Anthony? Now that the cat is out of the bag, I suppose I am entitled to know. Are you a stenographer, my dear, or perhaps a manicurist, or a department store clerk?"

Miriam drew a long breath. She felt suddenly as if the restraint that had held her all evening had dropped from her, and she was free at last.

"I design dresses for the firm of Carson & Holland, Mrs. Breen. I am not ashamed of it, and it was wrong to keep it from you. There is no reason why you should not know."

Her young eyes looked directly into the old ones opposite, and it was Mrs. Breen who first looked away, but she never afterward forgot that fact, as Miriam was to realize later.

Knot Not What We Thought.

Boston Transcript: Someone is always taking the romance out of life. Here's Hilaire Belloc telling us that the true lover's knot is a purely ornamental knot which comes undone when a strain is put upon it—so the term, after all, is less poetical than cynical.

MEN AND THINGS

When one allows his eyes to scan the list of courses available for farmers' boys at the state agricultural college he is amazed at the variety and scope of training possible. He also wonders why more of those for whose benefit and improvement the college is maintained do not take advantage of the opportunities offered. Here is gathered the data relating to the successes of those who have experimented in every line of agricultural production, the ripe knowledge garnered from experience. It ought to mean many dollars added to a farmer's income to know how successful farmers get that way.

The demand at the college is for courses of a practical character, and because of this there has been added instruction, day and evening, for those who like to know about magazine writing, publicity work and magazine and book editing. Prof. R. P. Crawford, a former member of the Journal staff and a man who early acquired the knack of preparing matter for which magazine editors eagerly reach, is offering students a course in how to discover, write and sell special feature articles, and in response to a demand from those employed during the day has added a one evening a week course for the next three months. Most persons have a yearning to write, but don't know how to make a beginning. Their opportunity is here presented.

Complete freedom for men and women is, of course, impossible in a world where there are two or more persons whose interests touch. Everybody cannot possibly do what they please in this world because at some point or another the practice of this theory runs up against a clash of interests, when there must be a stop and a determination of which one is entitled to do as he pleases and which to cease doing as he pleases. Being practical people we have established the rule that one man's rights end where another's begin, and it works very well save where some overgrown child who has not accomplished the feat of self-control and who retains the selfishness of childhood butts in and demands "Me First."

The fact that it is possible now and then to point to the wonderful material success of some boy who in his adolescence was properly accorded the title of being "plain ornery" is not of any significance even tho there are some people who seem to think so. At least when they discover such a man they look about them with an "I told you so" air. This is but another proof of the soundness of the theory that a rule is best proved by the exceptions to it. An ornery boy is very likely to turn out to be an ornery man, because the qualities that earned him the title as a boy will likely cling to him, and few are able to fling off a bad habit acquired in extreme youth.

Everybody knows and realizes that the lower house of congress is too large to do any effective business. Thus it becomes necessary that the house itself adopt, in advance of the consideration of any legislation, rules that apply to all save excepted classes of bills, and which make discussion and debate impossible. Having listened in for a number of years on legislative debates we cannot bring ourselves to hold that to be a calamity, but what we mean is that because of the large membership and the immense amount of work to be done a situation is created that effectively hands over legislation to a few bold and intelligent groups.

COLOR BLIND?

"Think hard, sister, and be sure you are right," replied the wisdom seeker. "I'm married to a blond."—St. Louis Times.

Cincinnati Enquirer: "This doctor says people with colds should be quarantined," remarked Mrs. Grouch. "I suppose that is so they can't give them to other people."

"No, of course not," growled her husband: "it is to keep people from giving them advice on how to cure them."

BRAIN TESTS

(By Sam Loyd.)

Three Minutes to Answer This.

A well known tree transposed aright
Will turn the darkness into light;
Or if you choose to drop its tail,
A friend stands forth who'll never fail.
What is the word?

Answer to Yesterday's.

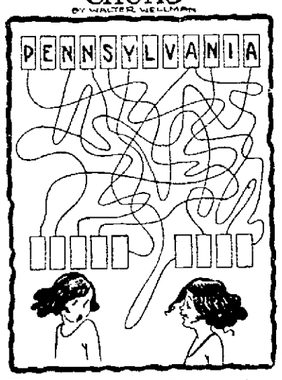

The fire chief stated that the ladder had less than one hundred rungs, and since we could see twenty-five rungs in the picture, it became necessary to find a ladder with more than twenty-five rungs and less than 100, which would agree with all the facts in the picture as well as the chief's statement.

It is comparatively simple to figure out that the correct answer to the problem may be arrived at by finding a number which, divided by five, leaves no remainder, divided by four leaves a remainder of two, and when divided by three leaves a remainder of one. The only number between twenty-five and 100 that will so work out is seventy, and the solution to the problem is that the ladder climbed by Tom, Dick and Harry had seventy rungs.

CHUMS

BY WALTER WELLMAN

The two young ladies are from the state of Pennsylvania. You are to trace each line leading out from a letter until it touches a vacant square, and then you are to print the letter in the vacant square. In this way you will learn the names of the two young ladies. What are their names?

Answer to yesterday's puzzle: The objects are FEATHER, HARROW, PEANUTS, CHISEL and TASSEL. The operas are FAUST, TOSCA and THAIS.

Misplaced Kiss.

Los Angeles Times: There were three at the little table in the cafe a girl and two men. Suddenly the lights went out and the girl drew back quickly.

An instant later there was the smack of a compound kiss. As the lights went out each man was seen smiling complacently.

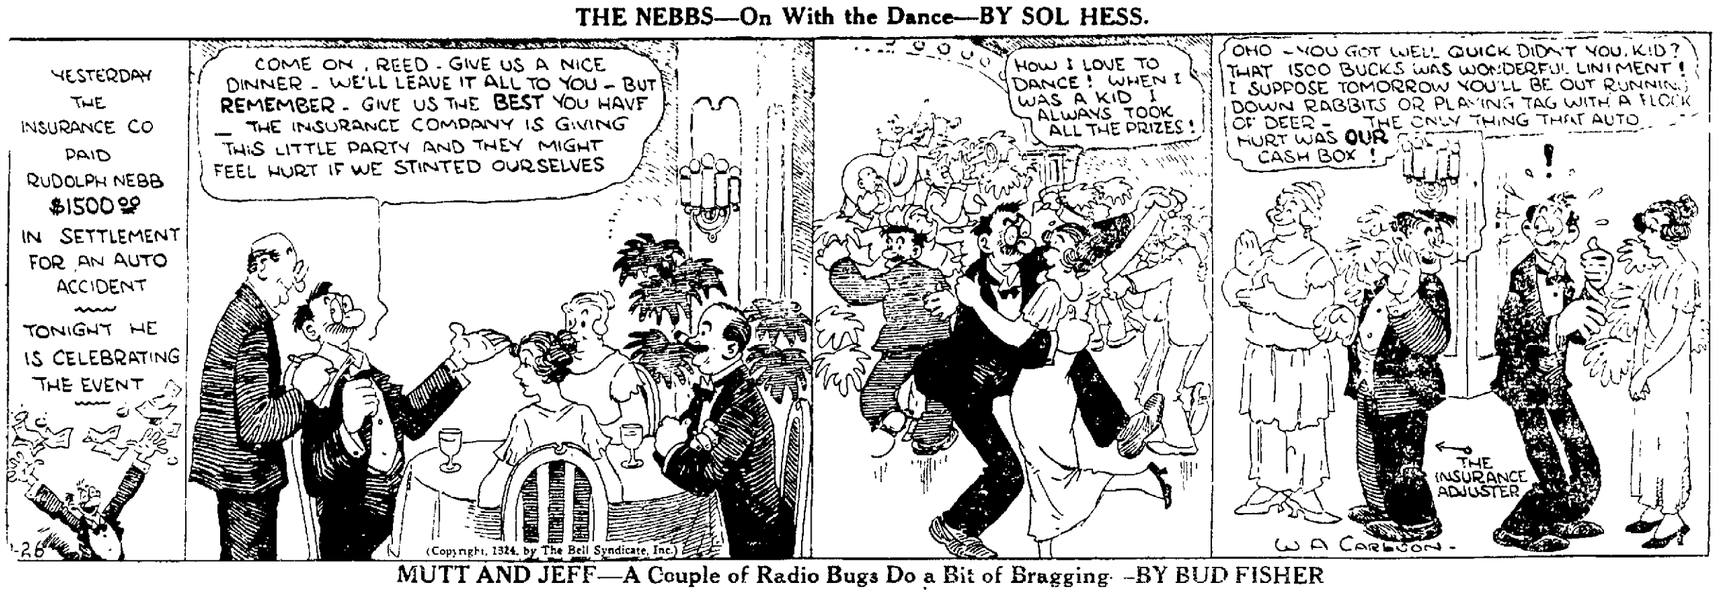

"I thought I heard a kiss," said the girl, innocently, "but nobody kissed me."

Then the men glared at each other and got red in the face.
